GENERAL NOTES

This issue contains data from the following sources:

Letters Received, Office of the Chief of Ordnance (OCO), 1876
General Correspondence of the OCO, 1894-1913
Records of the Adjutant General's Office (AGO), Volunteer Units,
War with Spain
General Correspondence of the Springfield Armory, 1900-15
The American Rifleman Magazine, Vol. LXXI, No. 17
Records of the Director of Civilian Marksmanship (DCM), 1982

Although we have not quite completed review of the records of Volunteer units in the Spanish-American War, it appears that we have gotten out the bulk of the serial numbers they contain. A few more are published in this issue.

We made a brief excursion into Volunteer records for the Civil War period and found a few batches of serial numbers for revolvers and carbines in use by cavalry units. In order to identify some of these weapons, it was necessary to consult the quarterly ordnance returns of the units involved. We started to compile a summary of the weapons on hand in each cavalry unit, for use as a reference; but considering that there were about 200 cavalry regiments averaging 12 companies each and with 8 quarters of data available, it soon became apparent that this would require a large effort. More than 30 varieties of small arms were reported, and several companies had as many as five different types in use during a given quarter. There is, of course, nothing in this data that would be of interest to Springfield collectors; but we would appreciate an expression of interest from any U. S. martial collectors who feel that it is worthwhile to continue this project with the goal of publishing its results.

Except for the list of M1 National Match rifles presently in the DCM inventory, which is published in this issue, we have had no success in obtaining other data from the active files of the Army; nevertheless, our efforts are continuing.

We are wrapping up work on the Serial Number Book and expect to have it to the printer in February. This will be the first edition; we expect to bring out future editions containing all-new data.

TRAPDOOR DATA

This issue contains a few more serial numbers of trapdoor rifles used in the Span-Am War. Also included is a copy of one of the Springfield Armory orders which directed changes in manufacture of the trapdoor rifle. A complete file of such orders would be in invaluable aid in establishing dates for changes made to Springfield arms, but so far we have been able to find only a few of them.

KRAG DATA

Krag serial data in this issue consists of several more blocks of Volunteer rifles, plus a few miscellaneous numbers.

LAST OF THE KRAG CARBINES?

The Springfield production records show that the last batch of Model 1899 carbines, 180 in all, was made in calendar year 1902; and we recently acquired a carbine which appears to be one of those. This carbine is serial number 368769, and it has the standard configuration for a late production Model 1899 carbine as shown in the bottom illustration on p. 92 of The Krag Rifle Story. It does, however, have two unusual markings.

For one thing, the last digit in "Model 1899" of the receiver marking is definitely an "8" that was overstruck with a "9". The other unusual marking consists of "G. T. 49" stamped into the stock just behind the side plate. These markings are illustrated below.

Our reconstruction of the Krag serial number sequence indicates that no. 368769 was struck in about Jan., 1902, which is consistent with assembly in mid-1902. The highest numbered Model 1899 carbine on which we have information is no. 362433, so we are in the dark on the usage of this one. We would appreciate hearing from anyone who has observed other Model 1899 carbines in the 368000 range, also any ideas on the "G. T. 49" mark (Georgia Tech?).

HIGHEST KRAG NUMBERS

Recent research in the Springfield Armory payroll records reveals that an additional 5,594 Krag receivers were numbered in Jan. and Feb. of 1904; so this extends the high end of our Krag serial number reconstruction to about 484000. Since no new Krag service rifles were assembled after Jan., 1904, it appears that these last-made receivers were used for replacements, which is consistent with observed specimens.

BAYONETS FOR 26" KRAG

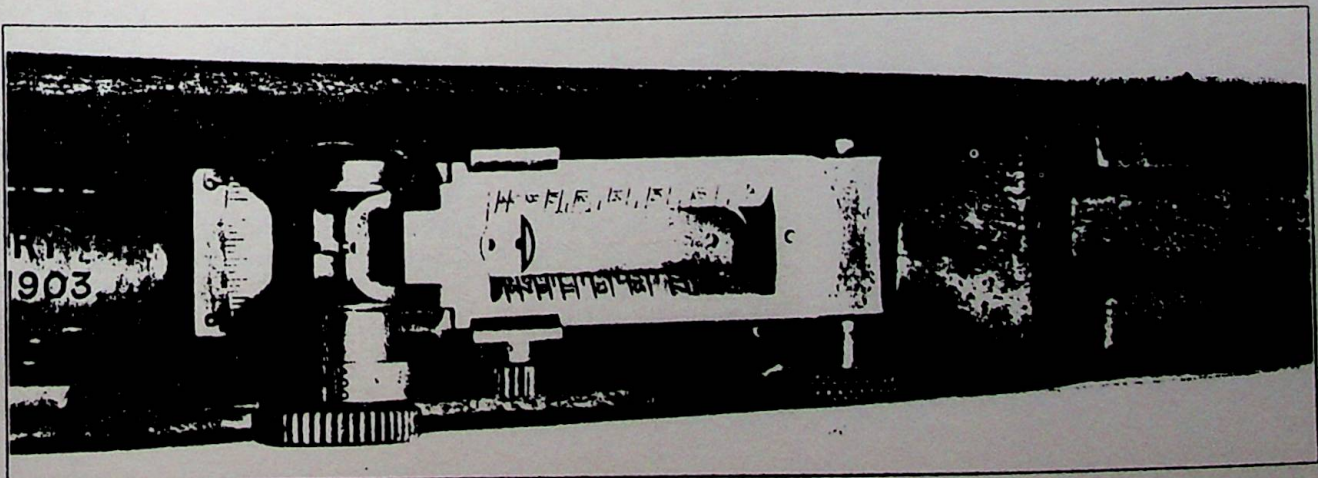

As part of our research on the Krag rifle, we tried to determine whether a special bayonet was produced for the Board of Ordnance & Fortifications Rifle (known more commonly as the 26" Krag). This would have been necessary, because the barrel of the Bd. of O&F rifle is larger in diameter at the muzzle than the standard service rifle. However, we were unable to determine whether such bayonets were produced, or even whether bayonets had been supplied with those rifles, which were only issued for trial.

At a recent gun show, Burt Kellerstedt showed us the bayonet which he acquired with one of the Bd. of O&F rifles, which solves this mystery. This bayonet is identical in appearance to the standard Model 1898 bayonet, but the bore is slightly larger as expected. To distinguish this bayonet from the standard one, the numerals "26" are stamped into the top surface of the guard between the bore and the grip.

MODEL 1903 DATA

M1903 serial data consists of 73 entries on miscellaneous rifles. Included are two more cal. .22 Gallery Practice (Hoffer-Thompson) rifles and 39 International Match rifles. Data on the IM rifles were found in the Feb. 1, 1924, edition of The American Rifleman, copies of which were furnished by Wayne Gagner. The IM rifles had barrels of Remington, Winchester, and Pope make in various lengths up to 32". Based on accuracy tests at Frankford Arsenal, fifteen of these rifles were selected for use by the U. S. team in the 1924 Olympics.

The illustration below shows yet another rear sight considered for the '03.

Warner Objective Battle Sight, set at 400 yards on U. S. Springfield Service Rifle.

M1 DATA

The M1 data consists of a tabulation of the National Match rifles in the current inventory of the DCM. The usage data for each entry shows the DCM number and name of the club to which the rifle has been issued. Rifles listed as "Camp Perry" are in storage for use in future National Matches.

The serial numbers of these rifles show a surprisingly wide range, and this lead us to challenge the accuracy of some of them; however, we were assured by LTC Joe Smith of DCM that the serial number of each weapon is a critical item within the Army, and that all these numbers are correct. One of these rifles (7087350) falls within the range of serial numbers of commercially-manufactured M1s; however, LTC Smith stated that no M1 National Match rifles have been procured from commercial sources.
