INFORMATION SOURCES FOR THIS ISSUE

This issue contains data from the following sources:

- * Letters Received, Office of the Chief of Ordnance (OCO), 1879-81
- * General Correspondence, OCO, 1915-41
- * General Correspondence, National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice (NBPRP), 1920-52

GENERAL NOTES

We have obtained quite a bit of serial data and other useful information on the Model 1903 rifle; as much as possible will be presented in this issue. There are also some notes on earlier arms. A 16-page issue will be necessary next time in order to help clear up the backlog of material on hand. The present backlog includes several early production summaries, more than 1,000 serial numbers of USMC weapons, Model 1922 rifle data, and the serial numbers of various non-Springfield arms such as Hotchkiss rifles and carbines and Civil War cavalry arms. We also expect to obtain data on M1 National Trophy rifles, and small arms issued to West Point cadets during the period 1905-19.

BULL SIGHTS

A memo dated 1879 indicates that 155 Bull sights were issued to engineer troops at Willets Point.

TURN-IN OF EARLY TRAPDOOR ARMS

In 1879 or 1880, trapdoor rifles and carbines below serial no. 50,000 were ordered to be turned in.

LONG-RANGE RIFLES

In Sept., 1879, 20 more long-range rifles were ordered to be prepared for Gen. Hancock. In Aug., 1880, five long-range rifles and 16 new buckhorn sights were sent to Creedmore. Twelve LR rifles were to be reamed out to accept 80-gr. cartridges.

25-SHOT MAGAZINES

A different detachable magazine, also giving a total capacity of 25 rounds, was designed by Lawrence E. Yaggi for his Sitascope (trench warfare weapon); and Springfield was authorized to manufacture at least 100 of them. It is not known how many were actually made.

MODEL 1903 SERIAL DATA

The Model 1903 serial data in this issue is nearly all from the records of the NBPRP and the OCO files on small arms competition, and they include many NM and IM rifles not listed in SUMMARY OF DCM RIFLE SALES. Incidentally, we found the original reports from Camp Perry from which the sales records were made out, and they confirmed that the data in DCM RIFLE SALES is very accurate and complete with respect to rifles sold at the interwar National Matches.

The listing of rifles issued for use at the 1915 and 1916 National Matches show that consecutive-numbered arms were issued to several teams; this is the only instance we have found of rifles being issued in serial number order. Correspondence shows that these rifles were prepared with the same thoroughness Springfield applied to later NM rifles, although there were no special parts or markings.

Among the interesting arms listed in this issue are the "solid bottom" IM rifles. Eleven of these receivers were made, in the serial range from 1341950 to 1341970, and they were used to replace the receivers on existing IM rifles. They are listed in DCM RIFLE SALES, but there is nothing in the sales records to indicate that these rifles had special receivers. The shooters who used these and other IM rifles in international competition were given the right of first refusal when the Ord. Dept. sold them in the late 1930s.

POPE, REMINGTON, AND WINCHESTER BARRELS

In 1923, the NBPRP ordered 20 each heavy-barrel rifles from Remington and Winchester, and 10 from Harry Pope. This was done merely because these commercial firms quoted lower prices than Springfield. (Note that the NBPRP, not being under the Ord. Dept., had to purchase all arms, ammunition, and supplies for use in its programs.) These firms purchased receivers, stocks, and other parts from Springfield and actually assembled these rifles. Serial numbers of 9 of the Pope barreled rifles are listed in this issue.

COLT AUTOMATIC SERIAL DATA

There are 82 more Colt pistols listed in this issue, mostly from the small arms competition records. Those listed as "MT" are .22 cal. automatics, but probably not the Match Target model.
