ISSUE NUMBER 33
Apr. - June, 1985

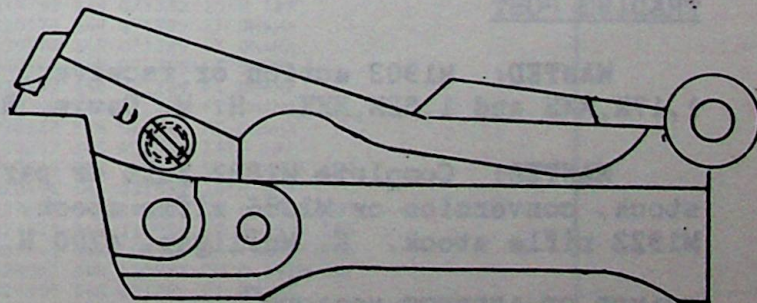

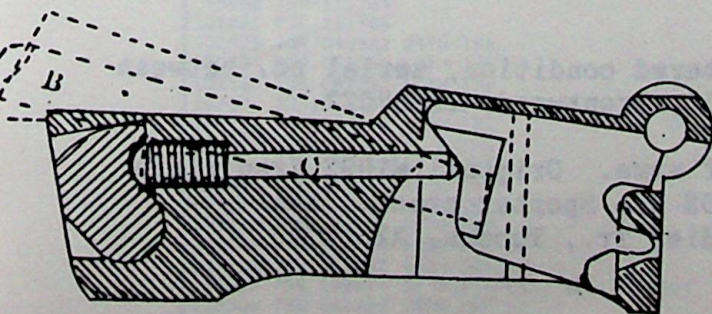

INFORMATION SOURCES FOR THIS ISSUE

This issue contains information from the following sources:

- * Letters Received, Office of the Chief of Ordnance (OCO), 1878-80
- * General Correspondence, OCO, 1917
- * General Correspondence, Navy Bureau of Ordnance
- * Records of the Allied Expeditionary Force (AEF), 1917-19

TRAPDOOR NOTES

- * The initial use of reloading (i. e., Boxer-primed) cartridges occurred in Jan., 1881
- * 303 cal. .50 cadet rifles were made ready for issue in June, 1881
- * "Gibs" (rivets) were applied to numerous M1879 carbine sights to retain the sight leaf in the center position. The rivets were inserted on each side of, and close to, the sight leaf.
- * Winchester delivered 5,000 Mills cartridge belt plates in May, 1881.
- * Six Long Range rifles were destroyed in a fire in June, 1881.
- * Springfield sold 553 Sharps trial musket barrels to Whitney in 1881.
- * Vernier sights were procured from Sharps in 1881
- * In 1883, Col. Buffington proposed a complex modification of the breechblock, incorporating a spring-loaded firing pin and separate firing pin (see diagram below). This was intended to ensure positive retraction of the firing pin and to prevent broken firing pin tips from causing accidental discharge of the arm.

TRAPDOOR SERIAL DATA

Trapdoor serial data consist of several hundred numbers from early records, plus 852 numbers of rifles donated to the Navy in 1942 and 1943.

Among the data from early records are the numbers of several of the Models 1882 short rifles and 1884 ramrod bayonet rifles, the first we have found. There are also numbers of quite a few arms used in other experiments and trials. Among these is no. 203907, which was used in a test to determine whether receivers having minor seams or other flaws were safe for use. My thought was that such receivers might have been marked with a star to distinguish them from normal receivers; however, there is no mention of this in the records, and a collector who has one of the starred receivers can find no flaws in his.

On the outbreak of WWII, the Coast Guard was made a part of the Navy, and one of the functions assigned to them was patrolling of beaches (as part of joint Army-Coast Guard teams). In the Navy (as in all services), there was a severe shortage of small arms. The word was passed through the NRA that civilian donations would be appreciated; as a result, thousands of weapons were donated by individuals and groups. Those which were of "standard caliber" (loosely defined as any weapon for which ammunition could be obtained, including not only obsolete U. S. military weapons such as trapdoors and Krag, but others including cal. .30 Luger pistols) were overhauled if necessary and put into service. The Navy records show the serial number and donor of every such weapon.

KRAG SERIAL DATA

Krag data in this issue are mostly from later records, including donations to the Navy. We have not had much Krag data lately; however, I am presently going through another series of field records which promise to contain more Krag data.

MODEL 1903 RIFLE SERIAL DATA

The '03 serial data in this issue is mostly for sales and issues to colleges. There are also a few numbers from the AEF records. Issue no. 34 will list 1,500 '03s used by U. S. Army Troops in China.
