Miscellaneous News and Notes

Research During This Period

Still going through the WWI unit records, finding just a few serial numbers.

In the early military records of the Quartermaster Department, I have started going systematically through the volumes in "Masteron's List", a poorly-indexed collection of records of the Purveyor of Public Supplies in Philadelphia. Only a few serial numbers (Harpers Ferry muskets), but there is some pretty amazing information on early arms.

Bannerman's Records

The records of Francis Bannerman & Sons have been turned over to a private museum in Delaware. I was tipped off to their location by Al Frasca, and I hope to go through some of them during the next quarter.

Your Tax Dollars At Work

I think I mentioned previously that, following WWII, there was a drive to get rid of all non-standard weapons in the Army inventory. I came across a listing of non-standard weapons "demilitarized" (by burning, then dumping at sea) at Fort Gulick, Canal Zone, in December, 1947:

28	Gun, machine, cal. .30, M1917A1
21	Gun, machine, cal. .50 W.C., M2
104	Gun, submachine, cal. .45, M1
46	Gun, submachine, cal. .45, M1A1
352	Gun, submachine, cal. 45, M1928A1
64	Pistol, auto., cal. .45, M1911
735	Carbine, cal. .30, M1

Springfield Sword Book

Here's an excellent, first book from "Mr. Springfield" (Burt Kellerstedt), ably edited by Tom Wiltzius: Swords and Sabers of the Armory at Springfield. It covers in great detail the twelve models and types of swords manufactured at SA between 1808 and 1928, and their scabbards — history, markings, etchings, quantities, etc. Fully illustrated, with 78 pages of text plus appendices containing manuals on saber practice. $22.50 plus $2.50 shipping, available from Kellers Co. ### 3rd Model Hotchkiss

There has been much collector, and writer, interest lately in the Springfield Winchester Hotchkiss guns, both rifles and carbines, which were fabricated jointly by Winchester and Springfield Armory in the late 1870, early 1880 period. There is one however, which was solely produced at Winchester and then sold to the government. That is the Winchester Hotchkiss Model 1883 Rifle. These bolt action magazine rifles, when they are seen at gun shows, are usually in excellent condition. I was wondering just how rare these pieces are; rarity of course, being both a factor of initial production and survival rate. At first, I could find no reference to the actual production of these secondary US rifles and always supposed the number fabricated to be limited, perhaps somewhere between 250 and 1000 rifles. In the process, I had an opportunity to acquire one of the rifles, serial no. 24230. These are the ones with the exposed, large receiver that divides the full length stock into two sections. Mine, as others I have viewed, is stamped on the barrel US, VP in an oval and DFC. DFC stands for David F. Clark, armory sub-inspector, and his initials are to be found on most parts.

Now having obtained the gun, my interest in its production data intensified. I have a rather old reference book in my library, "Winchester, The Gun That Won The West" by Williamson. On page 93, I found a note that Winchester had entered into a contract in 1883 with the govt. to produce 750 Hotchkiss rifles. This would have been too late to involve the two earlier Hotchkiss models.

Wanting to verify this figure further, I went to the annual reports of the Chief of Ordnance and found that in Fiscal Year 1884, ending June 30, 1884, "200 Hotchkiss magazine rifles, cal. .45" were purchased. The next Fiscal Year, 1885, beginning July 1, 1884, shows "550 Hotchkiss magazine rifles, cal .45" being purchased. The total is 750 rifles.

Still another reference, just published: "Winchester Bolt Action Military & Sporting Rifles 1877 to 1937" by Herbert G. Houze, gives yet more production data and should prove to be a fine book for U. S. martial collectors. On page S1 it is stated that only 712 muskets (Model 1883 Hotchkiss) were actually delivered to the army. The source given for this is a Hotchkiss Serial Number Register which would be difficult to dispute.

I think this is now nailed down reasonably well. Roughly 750 were noted as being purchased by the army, with actual delivery totalling 712 rifles.

W. R., Wisconsin

Hotchkiss with Modified Bayonet Lug

It was nice to speak with you over the phone regarding the Winchester Hotchkiss project that I am working on. As you requested, I am sending you the information that I have developed.

The Hotchkiss in question is a Third Model musket with the following modifications:

- The forend has been cut back one inch and the forend cap has been milled or filed flat on the bottom.
- A rather crude bayonet lug has been riveted (with two rivets) to the bottom of the forend cap on this flat space.
- The bolt handle has been heated and bent downward.
- There is a rack or inventory number stamped into the top extension of the butt plate.

My interest in this variation of the Hotchkiss was sparked by a friend who had a great uncle who returned from WWI with one of these muskets. He was a member of the Supply Company of the 160th Infantry, 40th Division. He mustered out of service at Camp Kearny in San Diego, CA on April 16, 1919. His name was Francis Marion Randall.

I purchased a second example of this musket from a man who purchased it from the original WWI veteran who brought it home. This man related that he was mustering out of the service and the supply sergeant asked him if he would like to keep the rifle that he had. He replied, "How much will my pay be docked?" The supply sergeant said that the rifle was obsolete and if he wanted it to just take it. He took the rifle, it's matching bayonet and cartridge belt.

To date I have examined twelve of these muskets and heard about two others. The serial numbers are as follows:

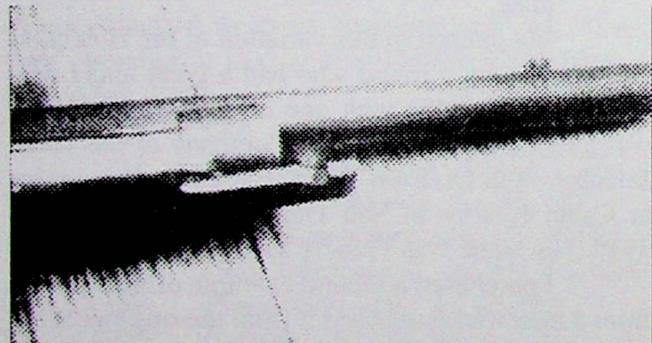

Serial Number      Rack Number

81155	104
81157	91
81250	Unknown
81262	136
81397	Unknown
81509	212
81710	7
81732	312
81784	233
81838	165
81962	94
82279	79
82313	186
83360	160

My best guess is that these muskets were used for drill purposes at Camp Kearny. They were shipped from Winchester on January 5, 1915 in an order of 361 arms to order #595814. Winchester has no record of who received the shipment. (These muskets were in the warehouse at Winchester from 1895, and hence were obsolete when shipped, either a clever salesman or a very good deal!)

My question to you is can you help me check the available records pertaining to Camp Kearny, San Diego CA or point me in the right direction.

E. M., California

This item was covered in Journal #15 of the Society of American Bayonet Collectors, and the reason for the bayonet lug was furnished by George Moller (reproduced below). The original users of these rifles are still unknown, however.

Here is George Moller's answer:

Art Gogan's article, What Bayonet for this Winchester, brought back some half-forgotten, happy memories. In July, 1957, I was in New York for the entire month and spent a great deal of time with Bob Abels and his associate, Bernie, also Ed Agramonte up in Yonkers, and also met Jim Hogan at Bannerman's 501 Broadway store, and "old man" White, down near the Battery.

However, the majority of my time was spent with Seymour and Gilbert, owners of Centre Firearms Co., then located on the second floor of a building behind the CBS Studio on 7th or 8th Avenue at about 56th Street. Centre Firearms Co.'s business was the rental of firearms and related weapons to the TV shows, stage plays, and movies filmed in the city. I recall Seymour showing me a sawed-off trapdoor Springfield, worth perhaps $3.00 at the time, which had been used throughout the entire extended production of Annie Get Your Gun, at a great deal of money each night, and which he claimed had yielded them in excess of $150,000.

The back room had been turned into a shop and had a loading area which turned out blank ammunition for the various productions. Included in the arms there, many of which were being altered for use in productions were a large number, perhaps fifty or a hundred, Winchester Hotchkiss rifles, all equipped with the bayonet lug described in Art Gogan's article. My understanding was that these rifles had been altered for use with some sort of then-easy-and-cheap-to-get 20th century knife-style bayonet for a theatrical production.

I recall that many of the Hotchkiss rifles had, for some unknown reason, some pitting for about a half-inch at the muzzle, although the remainder of each rifle had a significant amount of original finish. Gilbert removed the forestocks and inserted the barrels of the worst into a lathe, where he shortened the muzzles enough to remove the pitted area, then recrowned them. I shortened about half a dozen of these one afternoon, to help out while Gilbert was otherwise engaged.

There were some Mdl 1879 (2nd) Springfield Hotchkiss rifles with the same bayonet attachment. These were easily reconverted to "original" by substituting trapdoor nose caps. However, the Model 1883's posed a problem in that they have a special nose cap of different size/configuration from the Springfield, retained by a lateral screw, instead of a screw passing downwards from the barrel channel. Because of this, they were never reconverted to "original".

Centre Arms later moved several times within New York City. The last time I visited Gilbert and Seymour there, it was located on 42nd Street, just east of 5th Avenue. It was subsequently sold. Gilbert Stedman moved to Arizona and I saw him at a January Sahara show about five or six years ago. He told me that Seymour was dealing in semi-precious stones.

Hope this helps solve the mystery surrounding these arms.

What Model Winchester-Hotchkiss Is This?

OK, with all the interest in Winchester-Hotchkiss, I figured I should get one. Now I'm trying to figure out what I got.

It's a saddle-ring carbine with first model type stock, serial number 12580. However, it has a plain forend tip and no provision for storage of tools. Rear sight appears to be a Model 1877 carbine, but is not marked "C"; front sight also looks like M1877C. The whole gun is unmarked, except for the s.n. and usual Winchester legend and dates (ending in 1877) on the receiver, "U" on the barrel band, the sight graduations, and a rack no. on the comb of the stock.

Krag Philippine Constabulary #482458

I recently purchased a Philippine Krag S/N 482458 built on an 1898 receiver. On Pg. 105 of your great Krag book you state that only 39 Model 1898 carbines were converted and only three at Springfield. Mine has a nice JSA cartouche so I can assume that it was converted at Springfield and is rare. What are your comments on this rifle?

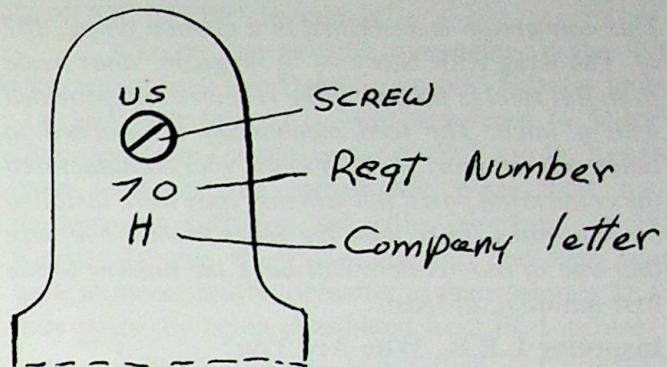

M.D.C., Georgia

Your carbine does not have a serial number that falls within the M1898 carbine range, so it cannot be said that it was originally a M1898 carbine. Its serial number indicates that the receiver has been replaced, possibly at the time it was adapted for knife bayonet & sling. Originally it was either a M1898 carbine or, more likely, a M1899 carbine.

Company Marks on M1861 Springfield

I own a 1862 Springfield 3-band Infantry rifle, which has stamped on the buttplate the numeral "70" and the letter "H".

I believe the number 70 is the regiment number and the letter H is for the company. Only 5 states had 70 or more regiments in the Union Army at the end of 1862.

After writing to the 5 states — Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York — I think this rifle was with the 70th New York. But as yet I have no hard proof. Could you please help me?

R. Y., Pennsylvania

This is a fairly common type marking; but without serial numbers to make some association, it is nearly impossible to pin them down. But possibly one of our readers has seen a similarly-marked rifle-musket with known provenance.

Krag Magazine Conversion

Enclosed are photos of a '96 Krag carbine #70949 altered as shown. It has the long stock, 1902 carbine sight, correct carbine barrel.

Question: Who did this, etc.? Gun is 100% mint condition.

S. M., Indiana

This conversion is described in a caption on pg. 167 of The Krag Rifle Story — "A magazine door made from flat steel is hinged to the receiver and provided with a latch. The feed mechanism is attached to inner side of door." I don't know who manufactured the conversion parts, nor whether they were installed by gunsmiths other than the parts maker. I'm sure that one of our readers will have the answer to the first question, at least.

Inspector L.E.B., Who Are You?

Have hunted through records here for listings of inspectors and sub-inspectors of U.S. small arms. The only listing found here was one included in the Dec., 1961, American Rifleman by Lt. Col. R. C. Kuhn. When checking this listing, it was found that there are omissions and errors. Do you know of a more up-to-date listing? Right now am looking for "L.E.B." who I believe was an Ord. Officer inspecting Colt .38 D.A.s in the 1893-1895 period or thereabouts. Do you have anything on him?

C.K.M., Pennsylvania

We published several listings of inspectors in past Newsletters; these were gleaned from SA payroll records. The closest I have compiled to that period is for 1905. There is no L.E.B. in that listing, but there is an E. L. Bolles shown as inspecting at Colt.

Trapdoor Carbines on the Western Frontier

In the issue October 98 number 86, page 86-11 etc. (Miscellaneous Trapdoor Rifles and Carbines, Cited in AGO Ordnance Dept. and other Records) are published various serial numbers of 1877 Springfield carbines (between serial numbers 126 035 - 149 092) who were given to various Indian scouts.

I wonder to what scouts (tribes) these carbines were given?

In the magazine mentioned above is a carbine mentioned as number 148 839 Model 1877 which in August 1885 - as well as in September 1886 - was given to Scout Pvt. "Little Man". In your book (Serial Numbers of U.S. Martial Arms Vol. 3 page 12) you mentioned: Serial number 148 839 Model 1879 is given out on March 14, 1888 to Troop L 7th Cavalry. I wonder if this model is the same who was changed?

There are other Springfield carbines mentioned which differ only in a few numbers i.e. 126 226 (5th Cav.), 126 229 (Scout), 148 801 (Scout), 148 803 (7th Cav.), 148 221 (7th Cav.) 148 222 (Scout) etc.

In your publication No. 45 April-June 1988 you mentioned Dept. of Dakota Records. Have the above mentioned numbers also a connection with this?

J. B., Switzerland

Records exist at various levels — Ordnance Dept., geographic districts, forts, regiments, etc. — and occasionally we find a copy of the same document at more than one level; this accounts for many of the dupes that may be observed in our data.

As stated in the Trapdoor section of Serial Numbers, there is a lot of confusion about model designations. We use the designation stated in the record, if there is one; if there is no designation other than "cal. .45 rifle" or "cal. .45 carbine", we use our best judgement. A carbine designated both "77C" and "79C" is the same gun; the rear sight may or may not have been changed.

Most of the Indian Scout listings were found in the records of forts, rather than departmental records. I don't know what tribe those particular Indians belonged to, but it can probably be found from the records. Some of the Scouts were Seminole Negroes. There are Descriptive Lists for many of the Scouts, giving their ages and physical characteristics (e.g. Complexion: "Copper"). I don't know very much about Indian Scouts, but my impression is that they were generally attached to a fort, rather than a regiment. Apparently, some or all of their guns had been previously used by regular troopers. I don't think we have ever documented a Scout gun, but I expect it would add considerably to the value.

Reissued Colt Armys

From his article in Man at Arms about Winchester Hotchkiss Martial Carbines, I understand that you and Dusan Farrington know each other well. So maybe you have his (E-mail) address. Point is, in Edward Scott Meadows Q&A section of the Gun Report of last January, he (Farrington) asks questions about the US/U.S. markings on reissued 1860 Colt Armies. In fact, as I understand it, Farrington is looking for proof that U.S. (with dots) marked guns are legitimate. I would like to point out to him that on page 73 of Worman & Garavaglia's Firearms of the American West (part II, 1866-1894), there is a picture of what is described as: "Heavily corroded from long exposure to the elements, this still loaded Colt 1860 was found near Elgin, Oklahoma. It too bears the marking 'F10CAV', stamped on the right side of the trigger guard above the rear bow, presumably indicating issue to Company F, Tenth Cavalry. That regiment did use percussion .44 Colts and Remington revolvers until the first half of 1874 when these were replaced with the new Colt .45 Single Action Army model. The 'U.S.' stamped at the forward end of the trigger guard indicates the gun was one of those refinished after the Civil War and reissued with mixed serial numbers for continued army use. (Photo by and courtesy Mr. Wensley Henry)" Please notice the dots. I cannot think of better proof that these guns can legitimately be marked U.S. because no basement artist could have touched that rusty old relic gun, as I understand it. If you think Mr. Farrington would be interested in this information, could you please forward it to him?

ratelban@wxs.nl

Done. Thanks for the information.

Tongue River Rifles & Carbines

Thanks very much for the information on the Cheyenne Ordnance Depot. If I may, I've got another issue I'm trying to resolve.

There are 23 listings for early M1873 Trap-door carbines and rifles that have the association, "TO FT LINCOLN FROM TONGUE RIVER." Only two of these are also "twinned" with at "FT KEOGH (SURVEYED)" associations. These two are:

5791 73R 1/29/78 FT KEOGH (SURVEYED)
" 73R 6/6/78 TO FT LINCOLN FROM TONGUE RIVER

and

17505 73C 4/1/78 FT KEOGH (SURVEYED)
" 73C 6/6/78 TO FT LINCOLN FROM
TONGUE RIVER

I believe that the numerous "FT KEOGH (SURVEYED)" TD carbines and rifles that are listed in your files were guns that were used by Cavalry (2nd Cav. and 7th Cav.) and Infantry (1st, 5th, 11th, and 22nd Inf.) units during Nelson Miles' campaigns against the Sioux/Cheyennes and the Nez Perces throughout 1877. Do you have any idea what the significance of the "TO FT LINCOLN FROM TONGUE RIVER" listings is?

I know that several companies of the 7th Cav. and at least two Dakota-stationed Infantry units (1st and 11th Infantrys) were transferred to Miles' command from Dakota Territory (D.T.) to Ft. Keogh prior to/during his campaigns. Were their battle-damaged carbines and rifles surveyed at Ft. Keogh (Tongue River Cantonment) and then sent back to them shortly thereafter to their primary D.T. duty posts (by being distributed from Ft. Lincoln)?

You've told me before that a regiment's firearms were generally surveyed at its post headquarters. However, in 1877, Fort Keogh was the likely location of survey for firearms used in the Miles campaigns because it was the command post for all significant military activity in the Department of Dakota during this period. How else can one explain that Cavalry carbines were being surveyed at Ft. Keogh in 1878 when the primary duty stations of the 2nd Cav. and 7th Cav. units were Ft. Ellis and Ft. Lincoln, respectively, at this time?

Sorry about the long query, but I'd be *very* interested in any of your thoughts on this.

hentzt@begv.beg.utexas.edu

The main purpose of sending 5791, 27457, 3816, and other rifles & carbines from Tongue River to the Ordnance Officer at the Fort Lincoln Depot was to call attention to fractures that were occurring at the juncture of the barrel and receiver; however, not all of the arms forwarded were damaged in this manner. There is no indication in this report of the source of these weapons.

"W.E.S" Cartouche

Just received and read Newsletter No. 87. It's great, particularly the Beard and Ferris Article. But, you've raised a question with something reported in your response to M.K.E., Virginia. As stated you've recently found Ordnance records pertaining to barrel and stock markings. In particular the 7/5/21 note says : " At SA, C & R (cleaned & repaired) rifles receive a small capital letter placed on the side of the stock above the guard, near the original final inspection mark. L for Leary, S for Strong, D for Donnally, etc. Full initials used on new rifles: JFC for Coyle, DAL for Leary, WES for Strong." My question involves the duration of William E. Strong's tour of duty at the Armory. The books by Brophy and Campbell would have you believe he served no sooner than 1916 and no later than 1919. But, that wouldn't correlate with your 5/21/21 date. The reason I ask is that I have a "4-21" dated Springfield '03 with corresponding SN that has a W.E.S. cartouche on it. For many years now I've been told that it is an incorrect replacement stock, and that it should have a D.A.L. cartouche. Indeed, I've never seen another stock from the twenties and thirties that didn't, so who am I to question so-called authority. Now I'm beginning to wonder if the gun isn't correct afterall. The only other clues that I've ever found that W.E.S. just might have been around after he was thought to have been gone are some photographs in Brophy's book in the "sights" section that show some of the experimental rear sights being tested in the twentys with a W.E.S. cartouche. And I've also noted that Brophy said D.A.L.'s tour of duty was 1918 and 1919 only, which we all know isn't correct. So, I've always wondered if anyone really knows anything for sure. Any thoughts would be appreciated.

MizzHansen@aol.com

Strong was definitely still at Springfield after 1919. His name appears in a 1925 listing of SA inspectors:

James E. Bliss
Wm. J. Bracken
Arthur M. Cooley
James F. Coyle
Chas. Drommer
Wm. J. Fennyery
Timothy J. Hines
Francis L. Hosmer
Wm. E. Hosmer

Daniel A. Leary
Thom. J. Lovett
Robin Matthews
Max Neidel
John R. O'Malley
Geo. C. Schnell
Emil J. Schoch
Walter E. Strong
Patrick A. Teahan

I don't have anything definite on assignment of final inspection duties at Springfield, but I think that Leary had this assignment during that period. We know that Leary was detailed to assist other arsenals from time to time, and no doubt there were other reasons for him to be absent from Springfield. It stands to reason that another inspector would be assigned this duty when Leary was not there.

mation on civilian employees from the National Personnel Records Center — something I have been unable to do.

THE U.S. REMINGTON MODEL '03-A3 REFERENCE STANDARD RIFLES

By Larry Byrd

The Remington Arms Company fixed-price contract to manufacture M1903 rifles contains the following provision as part of paragraph "A": "Fifteen (15) rifles shall be assembled from components of current manufacture, inspected and when accepted by the contracting officer, sealed and retained as standard samples. These standard sample rifles shall be the reference standard for Service use..."

Ordnance Department documents have been located that refer to these Reference Standard Rifles. Captain Arthur G. Snyder and Captain L. M. Moses, Ordnance Department, traveled to the Remington Arms Company, Illion, New York on 20 August 1943. The purpose of this visit was to examine the Reference Standard Rifles. It should be noted that then 1st Lt. Snyder had previously been to Remington Arms on November 19, 1942, as a representative of the Chief of Ordnance. He chaired a meeting of the Council on Rifle Inspection.

This article is based upon the report of Captain Snyder and additional Ordnance documents.

Fifteen Model '03-A3 rifles were selected at Remington Arms as Reference Standards. Captain Snyder examined these rifles in the company of representatives from the Rochester Ordnance District, the Army Inspector of Ordnance (A.I.O.) at Remington, and the Remington Arms Company. One rifle was observed to have "excessive tool marks" on the right side rail of the receiver. It was replaced with another rifle. The serial numbers of the offending rifle and the fourteen other rifles were not noted in the report. It was Captain Snyder's observation that the fifteen rifles were "...found to all appearances to be a proper selection. The bolts hand-functioned well and were well within the limit of bolt lift requirements. The rifles appeared complete in all details".

The Remington Arms and Army Inspector of Ordnance representatives assured Captain Snyder that the rifles selected:

- "a) were representative, that is not the best nor the worst.
- b) that the company would not consider these rifles as a maximum of quality which they would adhere to, but would continually strive to improve.

c) would be tagged, placed in a cabinet and two separate locks, one for Remington and one for the AI, and when one party wished to examine the rifles for reference, the other party would be present. That is, if Remington wished to examine them, the AIO would be present, and vice versa.

d) were selected at random from rifles of current manufacture which had passed Ordnance final inspection".

Springfield Research Service has published the serial numbers of these fifteen Reference Standard Model '03-A3 rifles. The data was gleaned from a Rochester Ordnance District report dated 24 January 1946 and directed to the Chief of Ordnance. The document reported that "Government owned rifles are on hand at Remington Arms Corporation on contract DA-W-740-Ord-36". The serial numbers of the Model '03-A3 rifles are 3761351, 3791677, 3809462, 3825583, 3833592, 3836271, 3864738, 3873483, 3879794, 3881928, 3894213, 3895245, 3896816, 3903282 and 3903717. In addition, there were thirteen U.S. Springfield Model 1903 rifles and one Eddystone Model 1917 rifle at the facility. Shipping instructions were subsequently ordered to effect disposition of the rifles.

S.R.S. has determined that U.S. Remington Reference Standard Model '03-A3, serial number 3903717, was shipped from Raritan Arsenal to Frankford Arsenal on 21 February 1946. This would indicate that disposition of at least some of the rifles from Remington Arms was accomplished at Raritan Arsenal. Serial number 3873483 has been reported in the collecting community and may have been sold through the Director of Civilian Marks manship. One of these documented Reference Standard rifles would certainly enhance any '03 rifle collection.

It is interesting that the available records do not acknowledge the existence of U.S. Remington Model 1903 or Model '03-A4 Reference Standard rifles. It would appear from known contract language that such a requirement would have been expected. This may have been an oversight by Remington Arms and the Ordnance Department. The known serial numbers of the Reference Standard Rifles tend to prove the point.

Why were there no rifles in this group from early production? Not a single rifle is present from the first Remington Arms serial number block of 3000000 through 3607999. This is the most diverse serial number block. It encompasses the Model 1903, Model '03-A3 and Model '03-A4 rifle production at Remington Arms.

Captain Snyder also visited the "L. C. Smith Co., Syracuse, N.Y." on 2 November 1942. His report of November 9, 1942 makes no mention of Reference Standard rifles at that plant.
