Miscellaneous News and Notes

Research During This Period

Most of our time during the past quarter was spent on Coast Guard records starting in 1910. We have found close to 10,000 serial number citations so far, for a wide variety of weapons. The USCG played a major role in enforcement of the prohibition laws, and so all their vessels and shore stations were armed for use in the battle against "run runners". The USCG was also very active and successful in target shooting in the '20s and '30s, and we were able to obtain numbers of many of their National Match rifles and pistols. I am hoping that finding some USCG-provenance rifles will shed light on unknown arsenal markings.

There is quite a bit of post-1910 USCG material to go through, then we will start on earlier material, which hopefully will turn up some numbers of S&W #3 New Model revolvers and Win.-Lee rifles.

We also went through records of the Indian Bureau (finding nothing) and some early Quartermaster records (trying to find the source of serial numbers of Harpers Ferry muskets used as patterns for the 1808 musket contracts).

High-Standard Deliveries

The WWII records are finally in shape so we can write letters on these Hi-Standard pistols. As I mentioned in the last Newsletter, nearly all of these documents give only the model, date, and "War Dept." as the customer. The suppressed pistols are identified as "M.S." (Military Silencer), which may be of interest to somebody.

By mistake, I printed out the shipment records for aircraft machine guns produced by High Standard during WWII. These identify the individual aircraft company or other contractor that these weapons were shipped to. If you have any use for these records, contact me soon.

The microfilm we have covers all shipments from the first (s.n. 5000) up to s.n. 4xx,xxx. However, my intention is to "letter" only the government deliveries.

Letters Received & Sent

Unusual Carbine Butt Trap

Please send to my address, as with reference to our phone conversation yesterday, all available information on the following:

U.S. Springfield - Model 1873 - Trapdoor Carbine Rifle - .45-70 Cal. - Serial No. 41,691.

The above carbine has it's Original and Correct Solid Butt-Plate, with the exception of a Key-Hole Modification cut into it, for a Cleaning/Ram Rod. It is similar to the Key-Hole in the Winchester Model 1873 Rifle Butt-Plate. The Key-Hole Modification with it's sliding brass door, covers an 8-7/16"-deep, round-hole in the butt end of the stock.

NOTE: It's not the same as the 1877 Modification wherein the Butt-Plate has a Swiveling Door to cover the trap hole in the Butt-Stock for storage of the Ram Rod & Shell Extractor.

This modification may have been done privately, or by an order from the U.S. Government. Either way, I am trying to obtain any form of information about this buttplate. See enclosed photo copies of pages from different reference books.

Perhaps, you may have information, which may help, on the enclosed Ordnance Memoranda Numbers 19 & 22; Annual Reports; Description and Rules for the Management of the Springfield Rifle, Carbine and Army Revolvers in .45 Calibre.

R. A. M., New York

I thought I had seen something about the Winchester-type butt traps being used on a few carbines in 1876. However, I can't find anything in my Ordnance record notes or reliable references to confirm that. The Winchester-type sliding trap was, indeed, used on some early Springfield sporting rifles. But the butt trap adopted for the carbine on Jan. 6, 1877, was said to be the same as used on the Spencer (i.e., the swinging part of the magazine tube).

I don't think it would be covered in Ord. Memo. 19, which is the report of the 1874 Board on Cavalry Outfits; I don't know about Ord. Memo. 22. But it isn't in Ord. Note. 22 nor in any of the other documents you cited.

"155 . MD" Mark on Colt DA .45

I have enclosed a photo of a Colt Model 1878 double action pistol. It has a 5.5" barrel marked .45 COLT and trigger guard, 45CAL. Serial #14806. I believe made in 1886. Pretty standard Mod '78, except it is stamped on the left side of the frame "155. MD" and with a separate large C. Have you or any of your readers ever seen such markings? Could this possibly be a Manila Ordnance Depot gun?, or a Constabulary issue?

In the Annual reports of the War Dept. Vol. 13 Philippine Commission 1904 there is a lot of information regarding the Constabulary and Scouts. It says "Report of work done in shops of the ordnance division. Armory - The armory is under an American foreman and it employs eight natives. The principal work is as follows: Cleaned, Repaired, Reblued and oiled 465 Springfield carbines; 318 Colt's revolvers, single action, cal. 45; 16 Colt's revolvers, double action, caliber .45" It goes on to say "Exclusive of those held by American soldiers and scouts, 7,370 Springfield carbines; 6,488 Remington shotguns; 3,989 Remington rifles; 5,129 Colt's revolvers, double action, caliber .45; 5,634 Colt's revolvers, single action, caliber .45; 600 Colt's revolvers, double action, caliber .41; and other arms. This makes a total of 34,975 firearms of which record is kept at these headquarters. John R. Schultz, Captain, Philippines Constabulary, in Charge of Ordnance Division."

D. T., California

We have had other inquiries concerning use of the Colt Model 1878 DA .45 revolvers in the Philippines, but I have never found anything other than the procurement of the so-called Alaskan model in 1902; yours is not one of those, and I can't relate its "MD" and "C" markings to the Manila Ord. Depot or Philippine Constabulary. However, the listing of 600 cal. .41 revolvers in that Annual Report implies that the PC must have procured some revolvers outside of Ordnance channels.

I recommend that you try to obtain a letter from Colt on your revolver no. 14806.

Winchester-Hotchkiss Rifles & Carbines; XC

As usual, I am seeking information and hope that the Service or MAC readership can help. My inquiries this time relate to US issued Winchester Hotchkiss carbines and to Springfield M 1886 24" barrel Experimental carbines. Firstly can you direct me to information sources on the development, regimental issue and field use of these carbines? Published information on these weapons seems scarce and brief. Where for instance, should I look in the records of the Chief of Ordnance (National Archive Records Group 156) for this information? Do regimental returns show issue and use of these weapons, and are "consumer appreciations" or field reports extant that might provide more insight into their non general adoption? Any information would be greatly appreciated and help me fill out the service histories of the examples I possess. Naturally I will be happy to pay any costs involved in your time, information reproduction etc.

My own examples are as follows and your informed comments would be greatly appreciated:

A). Winchester Hotchkiss: Second Model (with magazine cut off and safety lever on either side of the receiver). Top left edge of receiver marked "12809 HN", left side of the receiver has Winchester manufacturing and patent information. Cocking piece and bolt are both marked as is the tang of the butt plate above the screw. The Barrel has "US" and "V P eaglehead" on left side between receiver and rear sight. Rear sight is marked "HC" on left side below "6" range marking. Stock does not show any really hard wear but I cannot find any evidence of cartouche - could it be a replacement? I have read somewhere that stocks were prone to crack at the wrist and often needed replacing. Inside of nickel plated forend "door" is numbered "30". Is there any way of determining this weapon's service history? McAulay ("Carbines of the US Cavalry 1861 - 1905") states "The 4th was the only cavalry regiment to have been issued the 2nd Model Hotchkiss ..... "(p.106-7). Are Second Model Hotchkiss' in a separate serial number range from First Models as shown in Serial Numbers Vol 2 p. 150? (some published information - Canfield, McAulay - suggests that some Second Models are really altered First Models and that some Second Model carbines were built from First Model Rifle parts) Is there an established Second Model serial number range, and if they are alterations, can it be determined if they were originally carbines or rifles?

B). Springfield Model 1886, 24" barrel Experimental carbine No 338014, standard markings and configuration per Frasca & Hill - rear sight marked "XC" top right corner, cartouche faint - 188- date, "P in ball" is evident at wrist behind trigger plate. Barrel has "V P Eaglehead" with additional larger "F" (or broken P), and much smaller "R" at junction of barrel and receiver. The "R" is only just visible in the corner formed between receiver and stock. Do these additional barrel markings have any significance? Overall condition - much finish on metal, minor dings and nicks on wood - indicates little, careful service. Can your records cast any light on its service history? McAulay notes issue of 185 Experimental Carbines to 8th and 10th cavalry (p. 110). Can other issues be identified and are field reports of their use available?

D.P.F., England

1) You can obtain some information on the 2nd model Hotchkiss from the following files in RG 156 Entry 21: 839(1880), 4353(1880), 461(1881), 1401(1881), 1617(1881), 2579(1881), 932(1882), and 4953(1882). File 2579 shows that Springfield issued only 410 "New Model" Hotchkiss carbines during fiscal year 1881. The other files deal with development and field trials.

We have information on only two Hotchkiss carbines in the serial range of yours: 12704, at the 4th Cav.; and 12762, at the 23rd Inf. (both in 1882). My interpretation of the small "R" is still that it indicates overhaul; possibly the stock on yours was changed at that time.

2) The Ordnance records show the following issues of the Experimental Carbines:

1,000 XC issued July, 1886:

Ft A. Lincoln OD
Cheyenne OD
Ft Leavenworth OD
San Antonio Ars.
Vancouver Bks. OD
Benicia Ars.

I don't have information on the units to which they were issued, but this could probably be obtained from the preliminary field reports in RG156 E21 file 568- (1887). We have the numbers of only about 8 of those, for the 2nd and 7th Cav. regiments

RA-P on M1 Rifle

If it is any help in putting to rest this RA-P controversy, I have in my collection an M1 Springfield ser. no. 196384 in which RA-P is stamped on the left side of the wood between the sight knob and trigger guard — I don't get much into M1s, but isn't it in or around this number when a lot were converted into the WWII configuration? This one has the WWII type front sight, buttplate, etc., and was rebarreled in SA 3-51. It has all milled parts, and it is not an import; I have had this rifle for a great number of years.

M.C.A., Illinois

RA-P in this case is definitely an overhaul mark. I am not aware of a program to upgrade all early M1 rifles to WWII configuration. My guess is that it was simply rebuilt at Raritan Arsenal in connection with the Korean War, using new parts as needed.

WWI-era Contract Arms Inspector Marks

The letter from W.R. Jr., Louisiana in Number 76, U.S.M.A.C. presented a problem which could have been neatly solved had a copy of Clawson's Colt .45 Service Pistols been available to him. Chapter 8 of this most useful work "Ordnance Inspection and Acceptance: 1900-1945" covers this aspect very completely. Not only are the M1911 and M1911A1 covered, but also the M1917 Revolvers, both Colt and S. & W., the M1909 Revolver and reconditioned revolvers in caliber .38 Long Colt.

Clawson covers the subject of the introduction and use of the eagle head inspection stamps and gives examples of the numbers found on various arms. It would appear that each inspector was assigned his own number, much like the system of Waffenamt (WaA) or "Pleitegier" stamps used by the Germans during WW II.

A look at the small number of examples in my own collection appears to generally conform to the information provided by Clawson:

- 1) M1911, Serial No. 497562 - Eagle head over S5, and "H" for the ubiquitous Frank Hosmer.

- 2) M1917 Revolver (Colt) - Serial No. 17234 - "H" for Frank Hosmer and the cartouche of Gilbert H. Stewart. Produced before introduction of eagle head stamps at Colt.
- 3) M1917 Revolver (S & W) - Serial No. 96731 - S6, S2 & S26.
- 4) M1917 Rifle, Eddystone - Eagle head over 133 on butt tang - marks on receiver illegible due to hardness of metal.
- 5) M1913 Cavalry Sword by L.F. & C. dated 1918 - Marked on obverse ricasso, eagle head over "No 1"

While this new information sheds much light on the inspection process, particularly as it applied to Colt, there seems to be no information on the individuals assigned to use particular eagle head stamps. This may be buried somewhere in the Ordnance Department records.

P.L., Virginia

Definitely Not a Trapdoor .45 Pistol

Number 76, pages 9 and 10, had photos and a letter from Jim Stuart describing a "Trapdoor .45 Pistol". Both you and Burt Kellerstedt correctly concluded that the pistol was not one originally made by SA in 1869. I am 100% positive that you and Burt are right because I made that pistol in my shop many years ago using various original rifle parts and a few parts I fabricated myself.

I made it to shoot; because I like to tinker with guns; and because, as you know, I collect the Allin system guns.

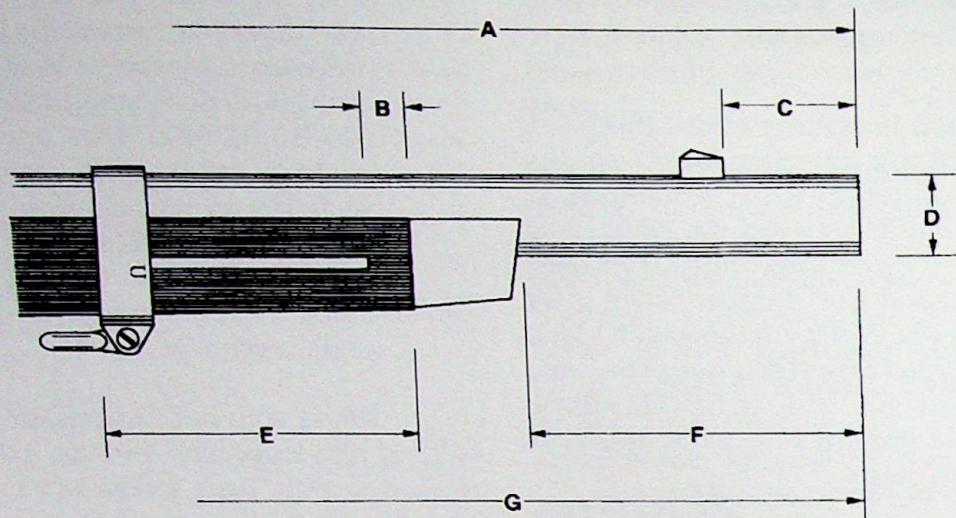

I sold this gun a few years ago with several other arms from my collection. It was sold for exactly what it was, a reproduction. Since an examination will quickly reveal that it is a reproduction, I never thought to mark it in any way, something that may have been a mistake. I have seen other such pistols at gun shows, but none so closely duplicating an original as mine.

I hope that Mr. Stuart will do what I should have done — mark the gun in some way to assure that it doesn't find its way into the legitimate antique market.

R.M., New Mexico

It's always a good idea to mark any reproductions you make.

G Breech screw joint to muzzle	40.00"	35.94"	40.00"	36.19"	36.00"	35.97"	36.00"

I have just acquired a two-banded 1866, and have a couple of questions, even after reading, and re-reading, your excellent article from MAA (has it really been four years!) This is a gun that I had always avoided, for one reason or another, prior to your story. Those few specimens I had seen were either clearly not right, or just plain ugly. But, more recently, I'd sort of been looking for one.

This gun is fairly sharp, except that there are no cartouches left on the wood. Some light sanding may have been done, but the side flats are still very crisp. Stock is pure '66 type (no '68 inletting) and has a very nice band spring patch. It is cut for spoon, but one is not present, though the pin is. Breech block is the later type, with cap and screw on the right side. There is no cleaning rod keeper near the upper band, it does have the threaded nut above the trigger guard. Rod was wrong (a bobbed 1873), but I do have a spare '66 rod, saved for many years. It fits in quite snugly, in fact it is rather tight, and it appears that it is being forced away from the barrel slightly, by the stock tip.

Question 1: To what length should the cleaning rod, for use with THAT stock, and rod retaining system, be shortened? Are they supposed to be (nominally) flush with end of barrel, as on the then-current '68's; or, should they be recessed, as on the full length 1866? At the 1867 Cadet (which is another case entirely, of course) the rod WAS recessed, but the gun pictured, at full-length, in your article, has the rod flush.

Also, please see attached drawing and dimensions, taken off some of my guns. I DID measure the barrel length before I bought the new gun (and so knew IT was a little bit long), however I trusted my eyes for the rest of the relationships, which, as you can see, may not have been a good idea, since they are all a bit off! Which leads me to:

Question 2: Are these variances within what one should consider acceptable limits for this altered arm? You indicated that you had studied, and suppose measured, several guns. Do you still have that research? It appears that there is more latitude in the various dimensions, even on unaltered arms, than I had expected, at least based on the few guns compared.

R.H., California

I can't find my folder on the short Model 1866 muskets; however, I don't think I measured any ramrods.

Considering that these rifles were all cut down from regular muskets that had suffered damage near the muzzle, and the expectation that the extent of the damage may have varied from gun to gun, they probably varied somewhat in barrel length.

The rod on the specimen in my collection has a length of about 35 $\frac{5}{8}$ "; and if you drop it down the barrel with the breech closed, it protrudes approx. 3 $\frac{3}{8}$ ". This makes it flush with the muzzle when stored, and I think this is characteristic of these short rifles. However, my specimen is different from yours in that it has the single-shoulder retainer in its stock, with corresponding ramrod (identical to the single-shoulder rod for the Model 1868 rifle). The full-length M'66 rod is thicker than the M'68 rod; my '66 short rifle will accept one (very snugly), but my '68 rifle will not.

Because your rifle has the screw-in rod keeper, you will need a M'66-type without shoulders. You can cut down your 3-band rod, thread the end, and see if it will fit. If it doesn't, you will have a problem; probably the best solution will be to turn down the rod slightly, because enlarging the ramrod channel is difficult and can lead to a ruined stock if not done properly.

Maybe we will hear from somebody who has one of these 2-band M'66 rifles with screw-in keeper.

USMC RTE Sniper Rifle

Here's one I hope will make your next volume of Serial Numbers of U.S. Martial Arms.

I recently had the good fortune to acquire another 1903 A1 Springfield in the U.S.M.C. Sniper configuration. The rifle was on loan to the U.S.M.C. Museum at the Marine Recruit Depot, in San Diego California.(Boot Camp). The rifle was put on display by the owner, who just happened to be the museum's Director. As a long time supporter of the museum, I asked and received permission to do a Data Sheet on the weapon to determine its authenticity. To make a long story short, I managed to purchase the rifle.

The rifle, Ser. #1344036, is or was a 1930 National Match. It has been re-barreled with a 1938 standard bbl. The "C" stock has the D.A.L. cartouche with the serial number 1370220 stamped on the bottom. The polished and #ed bolt has been blued over, as many of the original guns have.

The rifle was given to the Director last year by an old friend and fellow Marine Officer. The rifle was in its original R.E.A. shipping box addressed to Captain Keith Rice. The rifle was shipped from Marine Corps Supply Center, Barstow California in November of 1954. The box also had the serial number of the rifle on it.

Enclosed are copies of the original purchase order and the tags that were attached to the rifle when it was shipped. Also is a copy of the letter I got when I purchased the rifle. The rifle was also wrapped in period green wax paper.

In lieu of the original bill of sale I believe this to be an authentic U.S.M.C. Sniper Rifle. There are a few other features which also help identify this rifle as being authentic.

There was no scope shipped with the rifle.

I must be a very lucky guy as this is the third MARCOR Sniper Rifle I have owned.

Any information you may have on this rifle would be greatly appreciated.

Nothing on this serial number, but my understanding is that many of the Marine officers who bought '03 rifles during that period got Sniper-type rifles.

Warner-Swasey Scopes on Canadian Rifles

Enclosed are several enlarged xeroxs from a WWII PM on the Ross rifle (describing and illustrating usage of the Telescopic Musket Sight, Model 1908, on the Ross Mark III (T) rifle). Primarily relegated to training and guard duty by this date, it was still a popular sniper's weapon. The "cut" for the sniping version is lifted from the U.S. manual showing the 1903. W&S scopes saw service on both P-14's and Ross M10's during the War, especially in the Italian Campaign.

I also enclose a brief notice that may be of interest to the readership on the Museum's upcoming display program; if you could afford it a few lines, I would appreciate it.

Bruce Ellis, Nova Scotia

Strange ... I wonder where the Canadians obtained M1908 sights in 1940?

Halifax Army Museum Exhibits

For collectors traveling to Canada this year, The Army Museum in Halifax, Nova Scotia, has three exhibitions of interest: Foundations...The Early Military Heritage of Atlantic Canada; Valor Remembered...A Tribute to the Veterans of Hong Kong; and the first phase of a three year presentation, In Flanders Fields...Atlantic Canadians in The Great War, 1914-1918.

The Museum's Curator, Bruce Ellis, is an active collector and would welcome readers for special tours. Bruce and his wife, Anna, also host a bed and breakfast in their charming Victorian home, Caribou Lodge; the only accommodation in Halifax with a Lantaka on the piano! To contact Bruce at the Museum: Tel. 902-422-5979, FAX: 902-426-4228. The Army Museum, P.O. Box 3666, Halifax South, Nova Scotia, Canada, B3J 3K6.

Unusual Springfield M1879 Rifle

This is a M1879 rifle with modifications as shown in the 4 attached drawings (too voluminous to reproduce here. The most obvious modification is addition of a steel "blob" to the muzzle. The 5-in. long muzzle attachment, which is solid except for having a polished bore for the bullet to pass through, is secured by a cross pin; the barrel has been cut to 26" in length and turned down for 2.5" at the muzzle with a notch made on the bottom to accommodate the cross pin. The muzzle of the barrel is also counterbored to a depth of about 0.12". There is no provision for a front sight, and the rear sight has been removed. Although the tip of the attachment has approximately the correct diameter for an M1873 bayonet, there is no way to attach one. The stock has also been modified: in addition to changes in the fore end made necessary by the attachment, the ram rod channel has been filled in and, more significantly, a lead-filled steel cylinder about an inch in diameter and 4.625" long has been added in the butt).

Serial number is 166467. Stock markings are SWP/1881, and the usual circle "P" with a small "n" over it. There is a small letter "o" punched into the tip of the stock; otherwise, there are no unusual markings. The rifle now weighs 10 lbs.

J.W., New York

I have seen this rifle, but I still can't figure out its purpose. The attachment appears to be moulded rather than turned on a lathe, indicating that more than one were made. It appears that weight has been added to the stock in anticipation of heavy recoil. So it looks like it was made to launch some kind of projectile using blank cartridges ... but what?

Concerning M1879 # 166,467 with the unusual muzzle attachment and the weighted stock - I have received a reply to my inquiry from Dick Branum in Houston. It seems that this rifle came from West Point prior to Nov. 8, 1957. It was discovered in a "junk pile" (it is certainly not junk!) by a Richard Abbott.

Is it possible for you to check your past and present membership records to see if you have or ever had a Richard Abbott as a subscriber? If we can locate an address for him, perhaps you could forward a letter to him for me.

What do you think about writing to West Point to see if I can learn anything about it? Who should I write to? If the rifle came up as missing, etc., could I lose it? Is it better to "leave a sleeping dog lie"?

After seeing my drawings, examining the rifle at Cleveland and reading Dick's paperwork on it, do you have any opinions on it yet? If you look at Brophy's book on 03 Springfields, page 396-397, he shows a "Babbitt Rifle Grenade" which has a rod attached to it. This rod was to be put into the bore prior to firing. Dick's paperwork mentions lengthwise bore scratches, giving the impression that a rod was shot out of this rifle. Line throwing or Babbitt grenade, what do you think?

Could you please run a small article on this rifle and see what kind of feedback we get? By the way, it was a pleasure to meet you in Cleveland and I hope to see you again.

J.W., New York

I don't have the address of Richard Abbott, but I doubt that he could shed much additional light on the origin of this modification.

It wouldn't be a bad idea to write to Robert Fisch at the U.S.M.A. Museum about this rifle, and I don't think you would run any risk by doing so.

The other thought that occurred to me, even before receiving your additional information, was that this is a "punishment rifle" (my term). For certain offences, cadets were required to run one or more laps of the athletic field with rifle held at high port. Possibly a few special rifles were made up with extra weight and a distinctive profile for use by these unfortunates.

However, the fact that the attachment is made of steel rather than brass or bronze, indicates that it was made to withstand the pressure of firing some projectile. I have nothing on the Babbitt Grenade.

M1917 Rifle Serial Ranges

Recent issues of U.S. Martial Arms Collector have contained comments expressing puzzlement at high serial numbers of Model 1917 rifles. The reason for surprise is, I believe, that the more commonly found sources for production figures base the data on production as of 9 November 1918, or the end of the war (2 days later), or 28 December. Production continued after these dates. Remington's plant ceased production on 23 December 1918, Eddystone 9 January 1919, and Winchester 5 April 1919.

M. D. Waite (American Rifleman, September 1976) quoted company total production as:

Eddystone	1,328,260
Winchester	545,511
Remington	646,444

He also reckoned that there were some 75,000 (total) more produced than this, based on unnamed government records. In any case, note that the total, 2,520,215, is higher than some published estimates, even without the extra 75,000.

Because of damage, failure, or special usage, one may assume that receiver numbers total somewhat higher than total rifles made. I've observed Remingtons as high as 652299; Winchester as high as 525134, and Eddystone at 1379169. Surely there are even higher numbers. I hope this is helpful to readers, and that they will inform me of exceptionally high, OR LOW, serial numbers and barrel dates. (By the way, I've found no barrel dates later than 12-18.)

Win. Model 70 and M1 Rifles

In the January 1996 issue of "U.S. Martial Arms Collector" you mentioned some information concerning Winchester M70 Rifles in Service Rifle Team Equipment (RTE). Around 1966, I purchased a M70 Target Rifle serial number 74653 from Jim Shaw's Gun Center in Waukegan, Illinois. At the time, Mr Shaw had about ten M70 Rifles, most had medium barrels and a few had light barrels. Mr. Shaw stated that he had purchased these M70 Rifles as surplus from the Great Lakes Naval Base.

My M70 Rifle has the medium heavy barrel with scope blocks, the Lyman 48WH and 77AK sights. The stock is the marksman type with 1 1/4 inch swivels. This rifle is not marked "U.S. Property" and the stock is not cartouched. All metal parts are blued except the bolt, which is without finish with a blued extractor. The trigger is marked with a T on the side.

Also, I have four Winchester M1 Rifles that were all manufactured in 1941 with the following serial numbers:

120219
122062
128631

Please let me know if you have any information on the above M70 Rifle and the Winchester M1 Rifles and the cost of obtaining a letter from Springfield Research Service documenting any of these rifles.

R. S., Ill.

Sorry, but we have nothing on Win. M70 rifles in this serial number range. And the only thing we know about your Win. M1 rifles is that the highest number three fall within the range of rifles completed on Jan. 22, 1941. ♦

Guns "Lettered" During Current Period

The following firearms were documented during the period covered by this issue. If you would like to get in touch with the person a letter was written for, send us your message together with a stamped envelope with blank address. We will affix a label and forward your message. There is no guarantee that you will receive a reply, of course; but we write quite a few letters for dealers, who would no doubt like to hear from someone interested in a particular gun. Make sure that your message contains the serial number and model of the gun you are interested in, and that you furnish separate messages and envelopes if you are interested in more than one. THIS OFFER, FOR GUNS IN THIS ISSUE, EXPIRES ON OCTOBER 1, 1996.

Caution!

While we take reasonable measures to ensure the accuracy of serial number data reported here and in our other publications, there is a certain error rate associated with the transcription and entry of the large amount of data we are handling. Therefore, you are advised against paying premium prices for firearms based on a listing alone, without a supporting letter. In all cases before furnishing letters, we go back to the original records and confirm the data in the listing.
