Miscellaneous News and Notes

Research During This Period

Confederate Records

I went through all the company and regiment records at Archives I (some have been dispersed to State archives, and I hope to get to those later), plus all likely looking Confederate arsenal records. I found some numbers for Cook & Bros. rifles in the Alabama records, plus the numbers of 72 Colt Navy revolvers in the 108xxx - 110xxx range.

I sent the Colt numbers to Colt Historian Kathleen Hoyt and requested that she look up delivery records on several of them to see if we could answer the question of whether Colt continued to deliver weapons to the South after the fall of Ft. Sumter. Unfortunately, Ms. Hoyt will not look in these records without a payment of $100 for each number, which I am unwilling to pay. The numbers are listed in this issue; and if anybody gets a Colt letter on one of these pistols, I would appreciate a copy.

The records of the Corinth, Miss. arsenal were particularly interesting because they showed the system set up by the CSA to "recycle" captured or recovered weapons. A set amount was paid for each type of weapon, and it appears that a representative from the regiment making the recovery would take them to the arsenal and get a receipt. Quite a few Colt "repeaters" were recovered, but the serial number of only one was listed (Army no. 97158). In connection with our recent discussion of Colt revolving rifles, it was interesting to see that 19 such rifles were received from Capt. Jas. T. Wheeler of the 10th Bn. Tenn. Cavalry on Apr. 13, 1862; then on Apr. 22, 30 were issued to Lt. Col. Gordon of the 11th Bn. Tenn. Cavalry.

Other Research mostly concentrated on the inter-WW period and turned up more than 5,000 '03 and 1,000 M1911 numbers. Resumed research in the records of old forts and found a few more records of arms recovered from Indians. In connection with research for somebody on the Mexican War, I went through OCO Letters Received for 1847 and found a lot of interesting correspondence from Colt and Whitney concerning the Walker and Dragoon revolvers. I also noted that flintlock muskets were being issued to regular regiments as late as 1848.

WWII Ithaca Deliveries

Thanks to Oliver de Gravelle, the delivery documents for Ithaca M1911A1 pistols and M37 shotguns have been located among BATF records of out-of-business (OOB) dealers. Most of these merely show delivery to Raritan, Augusta, or some other Government arsenal; also, the original records have been destroyed, and many of the microfilm frames are unreadable. Nevertheless, it will be possible to salvage much interesting data; e.g., pistols delivered to the OSS (4,650 out of 5,000), Britain, and the U.S. Navy. It will take me a while to get all this data into the computer, but we will be writing letters on these guns for these same price charged for DCM rifles and General Officer Pistols ($10). I will be going through other OOB microfilm to see if there is any other martial arms data.

Mann Accuracy Barrel

This weekend I had the good fortune to acquire at a show the following item:

SPRINGFIELD ARMORY .30 cal. ACCURACY TEST DEVICE

It appears to have a Dr. F.W. Mann accuracy test barrel as shown on page 227, item # 3 of Brophy's book.

It is in .30-06 cal. (will close on a "no-go" gage, but will not even begin to take a "field" gage.)

The bolt is scribed with an electric pencil on the top 1536014. It is also marked B2 on the top flat area at the handle root.

The sear is a chrome vanadium type marked: CV B147176 S

The magazine cut-off is marked 5

The safety is marked 4

The receiver has traces of yellow paint on the "bridge" and it is also marked J C 11 on the bottom front flat area.

It came with no wood, and it weighs about 14¼ lbs.

The trigger housing is a rod bayonet type modified with a cross pin as shown on page 47 of Brophy's book.

I had almost expected to see a "star gage" mark and number on the barrel, but there is none.

This will make a nice addition to my collection. Do you know of any others? Is it worth a little space in a future newsletter? Any comments on it?

J.W.W., New York

No, I don't know of any other Mann-type Accuracy Guns in private collections. Yes, it would be worth a more extensive note in a future issue that would include your drawings.

Spurious '03s; Krag Carriage

In reply to the inquiry about the unusual stock on the early 1903 Springfield, I believe I can shed some light on the mystery. I recently examined two "unusual Springfields". One was a "T" barrel match rifle built on an early receiver with a serial number in the 400,000 range. It had an unusual cutoff recess and a rectangular cutout under the buttplate similar to the rifle in your recent issue.

The other rifle is really interesting. It is built on an original 1901 Springfield receiver and is not serial numbered. All the metal except the barrel is 1901 or Krag as is appropriate. The barrel is probably a fabrication as is the stock. The butt under the trap has the same rectangular cutout. The finger grooves are also not typical Springfield, but are different in configuration from the rifle pictured in the letter.

All of these rifles are non-arsenal produced. All three stocks have similar butt configurations. All lack appropriate lightening cuts and seem to be similar in construction. The JFC cartouche, in my opinion, is a reproduction. Each of these rifles displays characteristics that suggest a common origin, but it is not the Springfield Armory. Nevertheless, they are interesting in their own right, especially the 1901.

I sent along some photos of what appears to be a carriage for a Krag barreled receiver. What is it? You mention in The Krag Rifle Story that there were two forms of machine rests used at Frankford Arsenal for Krag ammunition testing. Is this the other machine rest?

M.R., Arkansas

The Krag carriage or machine rest shown in the photos you sent does not appear to me to be a type that would have been made by Springfield Armory or Frankford Arsenal.

Remington Pistol Conversions

For some story work I've been trying to determine the status of some revolvers intended for service trials circa 1871-72. The revolvers in question were the 1,000 Remington New Model conversions, caliber .44 center fire, that the Arms & Accoutrements Board (holding trials in St. Louis, Missouri, from March 11 and reporting June 10, 1870) recommended for trial in service. As late as February 25, 1871, the intent to have these revolvers fitted up at the Remington factory was on track. After that, nothing! I'm trying to find out if these revolvers were ever delivered to Ordnance at Springfield. I do know that New Model .44 CF conversions were done at Remington, but (a) I cannot prove that these were intended trial revolvers and (b) I cannot prove that the 1,000 Remington conversions General Dyer ordered for trial work ever reached Springfield in the first place. One way I may be able to tell is to learn where the "U.S." property stamping was done. Ordnance inspectors/sub-inspectors were stationed at factories like Remington, Colt, and Smith & Wesson as well as being in the Ordnance offices at the Springfield (National) Armory. The Colt Richards conversion revolvers, the Smith & Wesson No. 3 ("American") revolvers, and the single-shot Remington pistols delivered to Springfield and issued mainly for trial purposes in 1871-72 all bore the "U.S." government property stamp. Would you please tell me if the "U.S." mark was applied at the respective factories or at the Springfield Armory after these handguns had been delivered there.

On another matter, there are letter files in the archives of the Springfield National Historic Site that may further answer questions about the puzzling order for 1,000 converted .44 CF Remington New Model revolvers--questions like whether the order was completed at the factory or started and then cancelled or whatever. Dru Bronson-Geoffroy suggested I come down to Springfield to research the files myself. Unfortunately, I'm on a limited retirement pension and such an enterprise--though I'd relish it--is financially out of the question for me.

If I were to detail the specific files to be gone over, might someone from your organization or perhaps someone you know be enticed to check the letter files in question and report useful information found? I'd even be willing to pay for such work if I could afford the cost.

In any event, I'll look forward to hearing from you as soon as convenience allows and thank you in advance for any help you can give. A stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

R.P., Saskatchewan

I am not aware of any original records of that period which are still at the Springfield Armory — the originals are in the Waltham, Mass. regional archives, and microfilmed copies of most are at Springfield and in Washington. I have been through many of the letters for that period without finding anything more than you already know about the Remington Conversions; however, if you have some specific references, please advise and I will check them out.

As for the "U.S." marking, it seems pretty clear that this mark was applied by the contractor or the Armory sub-inspector at the contractor's site. For one thing, the difficulty of stamping casehardened frames (in the case of Colts) made this very desirable if not necessary; for another, it would have been desirable to avoid uncrating the arms after they had been delivered to the Armory, merely to apply a mark.

OK, this question has come up a number of times, and I'm going to go out on a limb and say that converted Remington revolvers were never procured for the U.S. Army.

I went through the ledgers of contracts and deliveries of arms during the 1870-1875 period, and I was able to find the pistols and revolvers procured for trial pursuant to recommendations of the St. Louis Board. These were found in NA RG 156 Entry 80 Vol. 10 pp. 415, 470, and 471; and Entry 81 Vol. 3 pg. 186. These ledgers list contracts for and deliveries of 5,000 Remington B.L. single-barrel'd cal. .50 pistols; 1,126 Colt revolvers cal. .44 altered for metallic cartridges; and 1,000 S&W revolvers cal. .44.

The Remington pistols are interesting in that they were not procured from E. Remington & Sons, but from W. C. Squire, "Agent", of New York City; also, the Ordnance Dept. did not pay for these pistols. Instead, they were "exchanged for 5,000 Remington revolvers under an agreement dated Feby. 25, 1871". Squire posted $55,000 in advance for the percussion revolvers, then was reimbursed at the rate of $11 per single-shot pistol delivered to Watervliet Arsenal (the Colt and S&W revolvers were delivered to Springfield Armory). This arrangement was apparently set up by the Secretary of War, rather than the Chief of Ordnance.

As mentioned in an earlier Martial Arms Collector, there is no trace in the ordnance returns of any Remington altered revolvers; this together with the ledgers described above indicating that they were never contracted for nor delivered, convinces me that they were never officially used by the U.S. Army.

My theory is that there was no contract due to the fact that Remington was experiencing financial difficulties at that time and consequently was not in a position to accept one; so the Ordnance Dept. turned to Colt to furnish converted revolvers for the trials. The single-shot pistol was essentially the same as Remington had been making for the Navy, hence that contract was accepted and assigned to W. C. Squire. Some of the 5,000 percussion revolvers received in exchange may have been converted by Remington or Whitney; but it is likely that most of them were sold by Squire to combatants in the Franco-Prussian War or others.

Thanks for your just received response to my query regarding the U.S. government property stamp and the records at Springfield. Although your name or initials didn't appear anywhere on the sheet enclosed, I couldn't see this coming from anyone but you. I am truly grateful for the time and effort devoted.

It's looking more and more like the 1,000 .44 CF caliber Remington New Model revolver conversions ordered by Dyer never reached Springfield. Charles Worman and his co-author, who did extensive research for their excellent Firearms of the American West, could find no references to the Remingtons either being received at Springfield or being sent out into the field. Your response looks to confirm the premise that the revolvers never reached Springfield.

Thereafter the revolver seems to have escaped notice in all the literature except in a 1920's Bannerman & Sons catalogue that makes reference to a Starr revolver conversion taking the same .44 Colt CF cartridge "as the altered Remington on this page." Remington DID convert some if not all the 1,000 revolvers recommended for trial by the St.

Louis board. And as I noted earlier, there was still the intent in late February, 1871, to have the conversion work completed at the Remington factory. Even by April of 1871 there is evidence that the Remingtons were still "in the works" as Frankford Arsenal was by that month turning out .44 "Martin" cartridges in 12-round packets labeled For Colt's and Remington's Army Revolvers.

Springfield received the Colt Richards revolver conversions from the Colt factory after mid-summer of 1871, and issue was under way by late fall/early winter. Presumably, the Remington conversions should have arrived at roughly the same time (although the single shot Remington pistols didn't reach Springfield until early 1872), but apparently didn't. One can prognosticate that sometime between April and August/September, 1871, something happened to the Remington order. It may have been cut back or cancelled altogether. Perhaps the ordnance department made some "in lieu of" arrangement with Remington.

I've included a photocopy of Circular No. 2--Series of 1871 that is revealing. If there were succeeding Circulars on a monthly or periodic basis for the rest of 1871 and again for 1872, reference or references to the disposition of the Remington order may have appeared in one of these. Thus, this is one potentially promising source to pursue.

Dru Bronson-Geoffroy, Archives Technician at Springfield, says: "the only other possibility would be a careful search through the microfilmed letters." I've enclosed photocopies of the index roll entry reference pages he sent me and the ones of pertinence appear to be nos. 26, 27, and 28 of 1362; no. 115 of 1385 (1870 to the end of 1872 only); no. 132 of 1386 (for 1871-1872 only); no. 151 of BOOK, Scrapbook 41, 1846-1941 (for 1871-1872 only); No. 174 of 1355, Press copies... Commander... Ordnance Department (1871-1873); No. 196 of 1354 (1873 only); no. 201 of 1359 (for 1871-1872 only--this may be of no use if it is only a "listing" of letters); nos. 64 and 65 of 1365 (1871 - 1872 only); no. 81 of 1352, Press copies of letters sent 1871-1872 (and possibly into no. 82-1873).

As you noted previously, some or much of this reference material you will already have examined, but there may be a few leads. If the order for 1,000 Remington conversions was cancelled or changed, the ordnance department spokesman would surely have been General Dyer. If this were so, we can almost narrow down correspondence to that occurring between Dyer and E. Remington & Sons (1871-1872).

I gather from your response that the Springfield material is duplicated in Washington. Ordnance department outlays for revolver purchases from Smith & Wesson, Colt and Remington during 1871-1872, if they covered the 1,000 S&W "Americans" and the 1,000 Colt Richards conversions acquired in 1871 and the 1,000 Remington single shot pistols received in early 1872 but not 1,000 Remington revolver conversions, would support the thesis that the latter were not received or paid for.

Seems there's much ground to be covered and while my enthusiasm is unbounded, it may not be contagious. As I said before, I'll be grateful for whatever information can be unearthed and the money-for-time-spent-researching offer still stands.

R.P., Saskatchewan

What Are U.S. Martial Arms?

In Number 73 page 13 of the U.S. Martial Arms Collector, you replied to my letter about the U.S. marked Ross Bayonet. In that reply, you stated that U.S. Martial weapons are any weapons that are produced or procured by the United States Government.

On March 11, 1941, the Lend-Lease Act was signed by President Roosevelt. Then the Lend-Lease and Mutual Aid Agreement between the British and the United States Governments was signed February 23, 1942. That is the reason for some World War II era U.S. Martial Arms being British marked and proofed. What about British arms manufactured in the United States?

Early in 1941, the British Government contracted with the Savage (Stevens) Arms Company located in Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, to manufacture the Lee Enfield No. 4 MK I Rifle to British Government specifications. The rifles produced at the Savage Arms Company were subject to inspection and acceptance by British Government inspectors. I own one of these rifles; it is marked S No.4 MK I - 1942 - serial number 9C8949. The left side of the receiver is marked U.S. PROPERTY. On the barrel, the "Flaming Bomb" is stamped into the side of the chamber. It also has the British acceptance "Arrow" stamped into the right side of the butt socket.

In 1949, this rifle went through a "Factory Thorough Repair" at the Royal Ordnance Factory Fazakerley, Lancashire, England. The repair markings are * ( F ) FTR/49.

This rifle was manufactured by the Savage Arms Company at the request of the British Government and with U.S. Government approval. I know of no instance when the U.S. issued the No. 4 MK I rifle to any of its troops. Did the United States Government produce this rifle? Was the British No. 4 MK I rifle ever placed in the U.S. arms inventory? Is this rifle a U.S. Martial Arm? The Savage Arms Company produced a quality No. 4 MK I rifle. Is that the reason the contract between the British Government and the Remington Arms Company was canceled in September 1941? The contract that was canceled between the British Government and the Remington Arms Company, was it for the M1903 Springfield rifle in caliber .303 MK VII? Which was the standard British Military rifle caliber at that time.?

M.McG., New York

The established definition I cited is more or less a legalistic one. Obviously, many people who consider themselves U.S. martial arms collectors have interests that range beyond that definition. Many would be interested in secondary U.S. martial arms (i.e., arms manufactured by or for a political subdivision of the United States); some would also be interested in closely related arms, such as Danish and Norwegian Krag. Then there is a wide range of military arms that were manufactured by or procured for use in the Colonies (before there was a United States). Very few would be interested in the average Spanish Mauser rifle; but what U.S. martial collector would turn his nose up at a Mauser documented to have been used by one of our sailors aboard a captured Spanish vessel? There are many other individual weapons that have acquired U.S. martial status through battle usage by U.S. forces, ranging from Gen. Custer's Remington sporting rifle, to the Colt SAA carried by Gen. Patton.

I hope that the foregoing will answer most of your specific questions. Arms produced in the U.S. by Stevens, Remington, et al for the British, Russians, or any other country are not U.S. martial arms, even if they are identical to those produced by the same factories for the U.S. government, unless they are subsequently acquired by the U.S. through some kind of procurement action.

Remington had a contract to produce .30-'06 rifles for the British; that's probably the one that was cancelled in Sept., 1941. The U.S. procured 10,000 Lee-Enfield rifles during WWI; these were never issued but are still U.S. martial arms under the strict definition. I don't know about the No. 4 MK I rifle; to my knowledge, no U.S. gov't-owned arms factory ever produced this rifle.

Springfield Model 1881 Shotgun; Md. Colt Armys

I have a Model 1881 Springfield shotgun ser.

918 and information on others. I would like to exchange data with Mr. Branum, and particularly gain information on # 918.

Secondly, in Vol. 2 of your Martial Serial Number Book on page 162, Colt M1860 Army serial #s 65302 and 65308 are listed as turn-ins (?) for Co. A 1st Md. Vol. Cav. I have ser. # 65303; is there any more data available regarding my Army or the issuance of the Md. Cav. Colt Armys?

J.T., California

Richard D. Branum's address is: ARMTEX OF HOUSTON, 4049 McDermid Dr, Houston TX 77025-5401.

Sorry, but there's no information yet on Colt Army ser. no. 65303; and I still do not know whether Colt Army revolvers were issued in serial number order (altho the indication is that they were not).

Duplicated Number on Lowest DCM Sporter

In August, 1993, I requested, from U.S. Martial Arms Collectors, information regarding an N.R.A. Sporter #1247903 which is listed in Summary Of D.C.M. Rifle Sales. Your research found that S.N. 1247903 was duplicated on another 1903 N.R.A. Sporter. One was sold Nov. 6, 1922 and the other on June 6, 1923. Since the N.R.A. sporter was not officially offered for sale until 15 January 1924, why were these rifles sold before N.R.A. sporters were made available to the N.R.A. membership?

The rifle in my collection has been rebarreled with a 28#, .256 Newton caliber barrel, the stock very tastefully reshaped and a Howe Whelen bolt sleeve sight installed by Hofman Arms Company of Cleveland Ohio.

I'm now trying to determine which of the two sporters I own. If I could locate the other rifle, the mystery might be solved! Could you possibly help me? I am just curious about the rifle and to whom it was originally shipped.

G.L.B., Texas

Finding the other 1247903 wouldn't solve the mystery unless it could be traced back to the original owner. Your request is the only one we have had for this number.

Springfield Armory stated that 21 Sporting Model rifles were "disposed of" between May and December, 1922; we have records on only 4 of those, with yours being the lowest numbered.

High-number RIA Rifle

I have a Model 1903, made at Rock Island Arsenal, and there are several things that puzzle me; maybe you can help me.

First of all, the serial no. is quite high (420949). According to C.S. Ferris's book on the R.I. 03, the rifle could have been assembled from spare receivers after WW1. The barrel is a Springfield, dated 3-29.

Here is a listing of the markings & cartouche:

Proof, rear of trigger guard, in block letter: 8-B large circle P.

Barrel —

3-29

Receiver — In block letters, no serifs, modern numbers, as follows:

U.S.

ROCK ISLAND ARSENAL

MODEL 1903

420949

The most puzzling is the cartouche, it is not boxed in, it is slanted, and if it stands for Rock Island Arsenal, shouldn't it be R.I.A. instead of R.A.-P.? Also, the high number indicates a made from parts rifle made up at Springfield, sometime after WW1 and 1929 Barrel date. I would appreciate any info. you can give me.

N. DeM., New York

The records show that RIA rifle no. 420944 was being used in March, 1929; nothing on 420949.

"R.A.-P." should mean overhauled at Raritan Arsenal; however, this mark is so frequently seen on Remington M1903 rifles that we must assume it stands for "Rem- ington Arms". The R.A.-P. without a rectangle would indicate the earliest Remington production; so we can't rule out the possibility that this rifle was assembled by Remington in late 1941.

Highest M1917 Rifle Number

I recently purchased a M17 Enfield (Eddystone) from a fellow not far from where I live. The serial no. is 1,364,283 with a barrel date of E-12-18.

This rifle after a good cleaning of years of dust and cosmoline inside and out came out in near mint condition with evidence of having never been fired.

As far as I can tell, it is all Eddystone with the exception of the rear sight and stock, which are marked "R" for Remington.

The highest ser. no. I have found for Eddystone is 1,332,477, which you reported given in Ordnance records in Vol. 4 of "Serial Numbers of U.S. Martial Arms".

Just how many of these rifles and/or receivers were manufactured, anyway?

M.C.A., Illinois

The highest Eddystone rifle serial number is not known, but it is obviously higher than the official number of 1332477. The Shanghai Volunteer Corps reported several numbers higher than that, but not as high as the one you have. ♣

TYOLOGY FOR THE REMINGTON '03 RIFLES

by Stephen D. Marvin

In a published letter to the editor in the July 1995 issue (No. 73), L.R. asks for other views on developing a typology for the Remington '03s, and it is to that call that the following pertains. References are to the two articles on the Remington '03, by Larry Reynolds and Fred Ewalt, that appeared in the same issue.

In both articles, the authors directly and indirectly identified the single great obstacle to establishing a given Remington '03 rifle in its proper matrix — the baffling mix of receiver numbers and barrel dates encountered. Interlarded with this gordian knot are a variety of stocks, inspector cartouches, and fittings. The inescapable result is to place many existing rifles into an equivocal state; which is a polite way of saying that there is often considerable room for question as to the where, when, and who of a current state of assembly. I agree with Fred Ewalt that there was clearly no coherent pattern to assembly of barrels to actions. However, I do not believe that unserialized receivers were assembled to dated barrels to be numbered later. Rather, I belong to the "deep bin" school which hypothesizes that upon completion, individually numbered receivers and dated barrels were haphazardly dumped into a variety of storage containers to be retrieved on call by factory "gophers" and delivered in crates to the assembly areas. In both efforts — "bin diving" and assembly — the press of production quotas compounded by human nature resulted in the easiest and most accessible parts being picked up, delivered, and assembled. As production pressures and rates of component manufacture accelerated, so also did the haphazard interim storage and "lazy-boy" pick-up practices. The most flagrant mismatches occur as the end of the '03 contract approached, indicating that those items which had drifted to the back/bottom of the bins were finally being retrieved.

So, how do we try to bring some order out of such a mess — a mess, by the way, only in the eyes of arms collectors who have a compulsion to compartmentalize, organize, and ascribe precise order and logical change into the development of an arm, whether there was any or not. I think we all agree that Remington manufactured four approved versions of the '03 rifle: the Model 1903, the Model 1903 (Modified), the '03A3, and the '03A4 (which has no place in this discussion). Within this macro grouping, I submit the following typologies or breakdowns:

Model 1903

Type I An absolutely pure Model 1903 service rifle as manufactured in the early 1920s by Springfield and Rock Island. Barrels will be dated 10/ and 11/41. Probably fewer than 2,000 were manufactured.

Type II A Type I rifle that has had the large gas escape hole bored into the left side of the receiver ring as had been mandated by the Ordnance Department for all M1903 arms overhauled or manufactured from 1936 onward. This is the only difference between a Type I and a Type II. Barrels will be dated 11/ or 12/41. I believe that between 10,000 and 15,000 of these were made.

Type III A Type II rifle that has been further modified to include some (but not necessarily all) of the following:

1. Barrels will be dated 12/41, 1/, 2/, and probably 3/42.
2. Lightening cut on the front inside of the forward trigger guard omitted. This is the earliest modification.
3. Rear trigger guard screw hole drilled all the way through. The second earliest modification.
4. Rear sight fixed base made without the decorative right and left side panels.
5. No-fingergroove stock with stock bolts.

Somewhere between 35,000 to 40,000 of these were probably assembled.

The Model 1903 (Modified) rifle grew out of the accumulation of progressive time- and labor-saving proposals which were generated in ever increasing numbers in the late winter and early spring of 1942. The designation of this model was promulgated on March 10, 1942; and over the next seven months, changes were continuously incorporated. The last rifle of the official M1903 contract was s.n. 3,348,085. Rifle no. 3,348,086 was the first '03A3 in the first block of serial numbers specifically set aside for this new model.

There are two categories — not types — of the M1903 (Modified) rifles. Because of the linear nature of the introduction of the numerous changes, one simply cannot establish a typology within the M1903 (Modified) production. Therefore, I propose the following means of identifying those pieces:

Model 1903 (Modified), Category I

This category begins with a Model 1903 Type III rifle with all of its various possible modifications incorporated. Depending upon how late in the production run the receiver was made, the piece will include additionally some or all of the following:

- No right side of receiver gas escape hole
- No bolt stop provision in the receiver or on the bolt
- No lightening cuts milled beneath the receiver tang
- No profile cuts on the front of the recoil shoulder
- No-fingergroove stock with stock bolts
- Handguard having straight, diagonal groove in place of the semi-circular windage knob recess
- Foreward trigger guard screw hole drilled completely through
- Cut-off seat and housing contours milled with a single, rough cutting pass
- Upper rear edges of the receiver tang no longer gently crowned, now milled flat
- Presence of what appears to be preliminary signs of the '03A3 rear sight dovetail on the receiver bridge, which first appears in July/-August '42 production.

There is another factor that intrudes along the route of this discussion. The Model 1903A3 was approved in principle on 21 May 1942. Remington received authority to change over to A3 production on 8 June 1942. However, the essential design specifications necessary for the change to be translated into the necessary machinery for production was not provided until 3 August 1942. Consequently, the overwhelming majority of the Category I '03 (Modified) rifles are found with no-fingergroove stocks having stock bolts and with forged and milled parts. The serial numbers of these rifles are below 3,348,085 and have barrels dated 3/42 onward to 10/42.

In October 1942 at serial number 3,348,086, production of '03A3 rifles commenced. This rifle, in its early production form, had a pinned stock and stamped and welded sheet metal fittings. The barrel dates begin in 10/42. It would not be unreasonable however, to expect that the very early (say first 500 to 600 guns) might have stocks manufactured with stock bolts.

There was, however, clearly a "life after death" for the production of the '03 (Modified) rifle. The products of this program are "overrun" rifles; their serial numbers are from the block of numbers specifically reserved for '03A3 production. They can be referred to as '03 (Modified) Category II rifles or as '03 (Modified) overrun rifles. Take your pick.

Model 1903 (Modified) Category II/overrun rifles

These are Category I type rifles to which all the previously identified changes have been applied. They must have serial numbers higher than 3,348,085. From an ideal collector's viewpoint, barrels should be dated 10/, 11/, 12/42 or 1/ and perhaps 2/43. However, in keeping with the "deep bin" theory, they do appear with pre 10/42 barrels. These rifles all have no-fingergroove stocks, generally with stock bolts. The farther the serial numbers get beyond 3,348,085, the more the influence of '03A3 production intrudes into their assembly, primarily in the form of stamped sheet metal fittings. This is particularly true of no-fingergroove '03 stocks with stock pins instead of stock bolts. I would be most chary of any pre 3,348,085 rifle with a barrel date earlier than 10/42 that had one of these stocks, no matter how pristine it might appear.

The "overrun" or Category II rifles are the unrecognized gems of the '03 (Modified) group. There seems to be no rhyme or reason to their serial numbers, and if there ever were a production pattern, it certainly is not now apparent. That there were two separate assembly programs simultaneously turning out different model rifles is undeniable; and the confusion which this must have engendered then, has persisted to this day. ♣

Guns "Lettered" During Current Period

The following firearms were documented during the period covered by this issue. If you would like to get in touch with the person a letter was written for, send us your message together with a stamped envelope with blank address. We will affix a label and forward your message. There is no guarantee that you will receive a reply, of course; but we write quite a few letters for dealers, who would no doubt like to hear from someone interested in a particular gun. Make sure that your message contains the serial number and model of the gun you are interested in, and that you furnish separate messages and envelopes if you are interested in more than one. THIS OFFER, FOR GUNS IN THIS ISSUE, EXPIRES ON JANUARY 1, 1996.
