Miscellaneous News and Notes

Research During This Period

At College Park, I finished the OSS records most recently released by the CIA. Only a few serial numbers and hardly anything on weapons procurement. There was an interesting note that listed "Rifle,, cal. .30-06, Sedgley Springfield, with bayonet and scabbard" as one of the available OSS ordnance items. I'm trying to get some more information on these rifles.

Also at College Park, I went through some of the immediate post-WWII Marine Corps records; turned up a fair number of serial numbers.

Using the Archives page on the Internet, I found a listing of photographs of Ordnance subjects which I had not seen before. I plan to capture many of these images using my newly-acquired digital camera. The Internet location for ordering information is: www.nara.gov:80/cgi-bin/starfinder/22073/complex.txt

At Archives I, I went through more of the Ord. Dept. classified files for 1917-40, more early Navy Bureau of Ordnance records, and some of the Ordnance Dept. letters received for the 1852-56 period.

Still looking for an official record listing the serial numbers of Sharps carbines used by John Brown, I hired a researcher at the Kansas State Historical Center to go through Brown's papers that are on file there. No Sharps numbers were found, but she did turn up the numbers of 36 Colt Navy revolvers issued to Brown's followers in 1858. They have been added to our database.

News from the Legal Front

I finally became convinced that the M1 rifle sales records are beyond the reach of the Government as a consequence of their being turned over to the Corporation for the Promotion of Rifle Practice and Firearms Safety (former DCM). Consequently, I engaged an attorney and filed suit against the Department of Defense under the Privacy Act of 1974 to get a court order directing the Army to retrieve the sales records, which have been ruled to contain protected data.

Obviously, I am interested in more than my own records, and my attorney thinks the court will order the return of all Government records that were released, without filing a class action suit. But if this does not succeed, I may be contacting you to enlist your participation in this suit.

My FOIA request for copies of early M1903 sales records in the 1000000 - 1200000 serial range was also turned down; but these records are still under Government control, and I am still hoping to get copies.

Marlin Barrel on M1 NM Rifle

I recently purchased a Garand which appears to be a National Match. It's a Springfield, serial # 1071827; receiver marked D28291-17; barrel marked NM MARLIN D6535448 4-53 84804 PM. Stock is glass bedded. NM op rod. NM sights. I spoke to Scott Duff he said all the sales records are at Port Clinton and they will not give any numbers out. Do you know or better yet have any information on Marlin NM barrels?

T.M., New York

I have no info on your gun; as Scott may have told you, I am still trying to get the M1NM numbers, but it is going very slow. I haven't seen anything at all about Marlin bbls for the M1 -- only LM and Springfield were used on NM rifles, as well as I remember. Go back to the Newsletter that covered M1NM rifles, and check the characteristics of your rifle against the info in that issue.

Cal. .22 Remington Rolling Block Rifle

I'm trying to determine if a rolling block I purchased recently might be one of Navy's 0.22 conversions. The rifle is a Springfield Armory manufactured rolling block. It is marked on the right side "U.S. Navy" and has an eagle with wings spread. There is a faint ESA cartouche in an oval on the left side of the stock just behind the metal. The tang has the usual Remington patents. There are no inspector's marks and the rear sight groove is half inch from the receiver ring. All this is typical of a rifle sold to France during the Franco Prussian war.

The unusual things about the rifle are as follows. On the left side of the barrel just in front of the receiver ring is the following stamping: "No. 7 WWK 1889". The breechblock has been threaded on its face and a penny sized steel disk screwed into place. The firing pin has been replaced with a sleeve with an offset firing pin that goes thru a hole in the bottom of the metal disk. The rear sight has had the ladder removed and only retains the battlefield sight. The extractor is missing, and the barrel is in the 50/70 caliber configuration.

I'm trying to determine if this is one of the rolling blocks converted by the U.S. Navy to fire 0.22 in 1889. Evidence for this is the breechblock conversion and the barrel stamping. Against this the lack of inspectors marks suggesting the rifle was never in U.S. service, no barrel insert in 0.22, and a statement in Flaydermann that the serial numbers were always two digits suggesting that it should read "07" not "7". Any help you might offer would be appreciated.

jlyon@DFPM.UTAH.EDU

I don't know whether the single-digit numbers were preceded by a 0; the report of shipment from Winchester lists numbers "1" through "9", but this may be a simplification. We have only four other number citations for these, all 2-digit. I have seen extensive documentation on these in the Navy Bureau of Ordnance records, but I don't think it went into the serial number striking.

Rifled & Sighted 1853 Cadet Muskets

It was interesting to read about your 1851 rifled & sighted cadet musket in issue No. 80. Although earlier than what I usually collect, in the past year I acquired two of them very reasonably. These were allegedly used at the US Military Academy at West Point and they bear certain markings that are somewhat similar. Will list these below and will include those on your musket and also a fourth musket recently advertised:

	LOCK	LOWER BUTT
	DATE	BAND	PLATE
Musket #1	1853	66	C17
Advertised	1853	180	C43
Musket
Musket #2	1853	182	A4
Your Musket	1853	244	A18

The "1853" also appears on the barrel tang. The number on top of the lower barrel band may possibly be tied in with the total number of muskets rifled and sighted. The annual report of the Chief of Ordnance for fiscal year 1857 lists 314 muskets rifled and sighted for the period 1856/1857. The next year lists an additional 9 for a total of 323. The marking on the lower band may peak at this number and it might represent a serial number or inventory control number applied at West Point. The butt plate marking involves both a letter and a number. The letter may denote a cadet company and the digits possibly a rack number. Other marks sometimes appear on these cadet muskets, but the ones listed above are constant as to location. I also have an 1851 cadet bayonet. Like yours, it is not numbered.

W.B.R., Wisconsin

I've been going through the Ordnance records of the 1850s to try to get some information on the 1853-dated Cadet muskets. I haven't finished this, but I did find an interesting note in the 1868 records from VMI, requesting that they be re-supplied with Model 1851 Cadet muskets.

Fred Gaede sent in a copy of a letter that he found in the papers of the late Bill Phillips that might have some bearing on this. The letter dated Jan. 12, 1866, from the Chief of Ordnance to the C.O. of Springfield Armory, stated that the Naval Ordnance Bureau has requested marks A over 1, A over 2, ..., B over 61, ..., C over 121, ..., H over 421 on the butt plates of rifles then being prepared for the U.S. Naval Academy. (diagram showing sample markings just like those on the butt plates of our 1853 dated Cadets).

I went into the Letters Received file for the Chief of Ordnance and found the original request to be somewhat different: "As the Midshipmen at the Naval Academy are divided into eight companies of sixty each for Infantry drill, and Admiral Porter desires that each cadet shall always use the Musket which is first given him, I have the honor to request that they may be marked with brass numbers and letters on the stock near the butt on the same side as the lock plate. The numbers and letters to be about one half inch in height and the letter placed just above the number — thus the first sixty muskets to be marked A over 1, A over 2, etc., the second 60 B over 61, B over 62, ... The remaining twenty muskets need not be marked, but I would suggest that some spare letters and numbers be sent with them so they can be marked when needed".

What model Cadet muskets were being made for the Navy? The Maynard-primed M1858 was the current model, but Springfield had none on hand. Springfield was busy developing the 2nd Allin musket and couldn't give much attention to the Navy order. Finally, they replied on June 27, 1866: "Several hundred repaired arms corresponding to Model 1864 except with barrel & stock 4" shorter and with 2 bands are on hand. They resemble the Cadet musket." These were acceptable to Adm. Wise (who said they should be sent to the USS SABINE at Boston) and were furnished, presumably marked on top of the buttplates as ordered by Gen. Dyer.

It is possible that the USNA had M1851 Cadet rifles earlier, but they would not have been dated 1853. A memo dated July 9, 1860, requisitioned parts needed for the Cadet muskets supplied from Watervliet Arsenal in April, 1852.

"S.A. SALES" Stamp on Krag Carbine

Recently I saw a M1899 Krag carbine with an unusual marking. The gun's serial number is 352783 and on the rounded surface of the receiver on the right side between the bolt and magazine is:

S.A. SALES
TY (or TV)

The "S.A." looks like a gang stamp that stamped both letters at once. The "Sales/TY" is also a gang stamp that stamped all letters at once. The marking is upside down in relation to the rest of the gun.

Have you or your readers any idea what these mean? Could it have been a marking indicating a sale from Springfield Armory?

C.H., Ohio

That's a new one to me. Anybody else have any idea?

Drilled & Tapped M1922 Rifles

In the article by Mr. Ewalt, he seems to infer (p. 81-13) that Model of 1922 pieces were not drilled and tapped for telescope blocks. This position is contradictory to the information provided in Bill Brophy's treatise, The Springfield 1903 Rifles. Specifically, on pages 276 and 277, Brophy includes directions as to how equipping one of these rifles with telescope bases could be accomplished.

There is so much misinformation, in part due to dogmatic positions taken by well meaning collectors, that I feel it necessary in this case to make sure that the fraternity realizes that a Model of 1922 with bases should not be automatically thought to have had them installed by some "...gunsmith...". A copy of the extract from Brophy's tome is included.

J. A. S., Connecticut

"In the February 15, 1924, issue of the American Rifleman, the DCM announced the following about fitting telescope bases to the Model 1922 rifle:

TELESCOPE SIGHT BASES

Arrangements have been made for attaching the Winchester telescope sight bases to the U.S. rifle, caliber .22, Model 1922, commonly known as the "Springfield .22 caliber rifle." These bases can be fitted to rifles ordered through this office at an additional cost of $1.50, provided the telescope is ordered at the same time as the rifle. The Winchester A5 telescope can be furnished complete with bases for $27. If the bases only are desired, but not the Winchester telescope, the cost of the bases, which is eighty cents, should be added to the above price. Purchasers who already have telescope sights that they desire to have fitted to one of these rifles purchased through this office should forward the bases with the order for the rifle. Care should be taken that the bases are of proper dimensions for this rifle. On account of the taper of the barrel, the front base must be considerably higher than the base usually required for single shot target rifles."

There are a couple of problems with the statement by the DCM quoted in Brophy's book:

1) The initial order of 2,000 M1922 rifles was entirely allocated to the NRA (but some were diverted; see letter below). Orders were placed with the NRA for these rifles, not the DCM. The DCM was obviously referring to .22 rifles made after this first lot. The M1922MI rifle was developed in 1923; it was initially proposed that purchasers be furnished the old (M1922) rifle and that the M1922MI be reserved for the service; however, this recommendation was not followed, and all subsequent sales (except for a few special rifles) were of the M1922MI and M2.

2) Careful reading of the DCM's statement fails to support the conclusion that the drilling & tapping was to be done at Springfield Armory.

3) A memo dated Feb. 12, 1923, from Springfield Armory to the DCM contains the following:

"4. Caliber .22 rifles have not heretofore been equipped for the Winchester #5A telescope, and it is believed that the blocks made by the Winchester Company will have to be specially fitted to fit the contour of the caliber .22 barrel. The estimated cost of so equipping one rifle is $8.00. If a number of rifles is equipped at the same time, the charge could undoubtedly be reduced. Explicit directions as to the location of the blocks and the distance apart should be given.

5. As the last of the rifles will be shipped to Washington (NRA Headquarters — Ed.) in the near future, the points covered in this correspondence should be decided upon without delay."

The reply by the DCM, dated Feb. 21, 1923, was as follows:

"2. It is not desired that these rifles be fitted with blocks for the Winchester 5-A telescope as it is believed that the purchaser can have the work done by his local gunsmith or the Winchester Company." Comparing the $1.50 price quoted by the DCM with Springfield's $8 estimate gives a clue as to why this work wasn't done by Springfield: they were just too expensive.

In this case at least, the "dogmatic position" seems to be the correct one.

"USMC"-marked S&W M1917 Revolver

July 1997, issue number 81. Page 81-4. Ltr from A.P., Pennsylvania, The USMC S&W M1917: by the description of the 1917, it is the Commercial Model; the crane and frame 43088 is the assembly number. The Commercial Models had the small S&W logo on the left side of frame and the grips were checkered walnut with a diamond around the grip screw.

The commercial models did not have stamped on the butt, U.S. Army Model 1917, or under the barrel, "United States Property".

There is one good way to find out what he has, that is to contact Mr. Roy Jinks at Smith & Wesson, and Mr. Jinks will tell him what date and who it went to.

Set-trigger M1922 Rifle

Surprised to see my rifle, 1922 serial 254, on the cover of U.S. Martial Arms Collector for July, 1997. Re: your comment on the set trigger, while it is neither Woody nor Rimkunas, it does appear exactly as that illustrated in Brophy page 142, upper left corner and identified as German type. When I sent you the photos of #254 some 10 years ago, I believe I included a photo of the trigger mechanism. Whoever is responsible for the German type trigger illustrated on page 142 is perhaps responsible for the trigger mechanism in rifle #254. Might this have been a service (alteration) offered at the time? Perhaps this tidbit could be mentioned in a forthcoming issue of U.S. Martial Arms Collector and elicit a response from one of your readers, shedding some light on who and where.

Keith W. Campbell, California

I'm sorry I got your photos mixed up with others and didn't give you proper credit, Keith. Thanks for the information on the trigger mechanism in this gun.

As I stated in an earlier reply, the first 2,000 M1922 rifles were contracted for by the NRA. Here is a breakdown of their known distribution:

Manufactured:	2001
Sold by Springfield Armory:	30
Dir. of Civilian Marksmanship:	2
Ordnance Office, Wash. D.C.:	2
Ft. Benning, Ga.:	3
Frankford Ars.:	2
Aberdeen Proving Ground:	5
Exp. Dept., Springfield Armory:	1
Springfield Armory Museum:	1
National Rifle Assn.:	1935

An unknown number of the NRA guns were repurchased by the Government.

APG was experimenting with set triggers in 1922 and 1923 to determine the fastest set trigger, the fastest firing pin, and the fastest combination of set trigger and firing pin. They used four different set triggers: the German type, the USMC type, type developed by Sgt. Ioerger of the Infantry Team, and a modification of Sgt. Ioerger's trigger. The documentation I have states that they were mounted in Model of 1903 actions; however, it's conceivable that one of these was later installed in Model of 1922 rifle #254. I recently came across a listing of all small arms on hand at APG in 1931. These included a number of non-standard arms such as a single-shot .22 S&W pistol (no. 7719) and a Magnum Mauser receiver (no. 104412) with Springfield 30" heavy barrel. Unfortunately, not a single Springfield .22 rifle is listed — probably an oversight.

Known Krag Cadet Rifles

What are the four known Cadet rifles serial numbers in the 35,xxx range?

35593 - Private collection

35786 - West Point Museum
35804 - Brophy's book
35??? - ?

T.J.P., Ohio

The fourth number is thought to be 35736. My theory is that there were still two Cadet rifles in the Museum (down one from the number listed in the 1898 catalog) at the time no. 35786 was traded off in 1948. The Museum card was changed to show the serial number of the remaining one (35736) and its accession number. It is not known how no. 35736 got out of the Museum, or where it is now.

M1922 Series of Gallery Practice Rifles

Since writing my M1922 Series article in April, I have been fortunate to have had some informative discussions with advanced collectors, published authors and a Springfield Armory experienced engineer. There is still much to learn and a lot more never documented on the subject of the M1922 rifle series. In way of an addendum to my article, I would like to pass along some observations, opinions and conclusions as a result of this research effort.

To correct a statement in my article, I have confirmed that the bolt throw and extraction cycle of the original Model of 1922 and Model of 1922MI/M1922MI is identical.

The cover photo of the April 1995 issue of Martial Arms Collector, No. 72, shows a full military version of the M2. I did not describe this variation in my article because I was not able to confirm a service related origin. Apparently there are enough in circulation to warrant the possibility of an actual military connection. The one I have observed is a M1922MII parkerized NRA that is now mounted in a pre-WW2 NM grade type "C" stock with matched handguard. The Lyman 48 sight was removed and the holes filled with plug screws. The M1905 rear sight was NM quality. So was the remainder of the stock group hardware, except for the M2 issue type buttplate.

The arsenal/armory receiver remarking of M2 conversions apparently did not actually start until some time after October of 1935. I have not been able to confirm or substantiate any type of arsenal/armory receiver remarking for any type of MI conversion which occurred prior to Oct., 1935.

In my article, I stated that I had never encountered a Model of 1922 modified to MI. I recently acquired a Model of 1922, serial number 253, blued finish, fitted with a numbered MI bolt and magazine. The Lyman 48B rear sight is also updated with 1/2 minute adjustment knobs. The receiver is not remarked in any way, and the rifle is mounted in the regular M1922 NRA stock. Also included with this rifle was an original type unmarked double striker M1922 bolt. The source could provide no real history for this rifle. My best assumption is an NRA sales rifle modified at the request of the original owner. The armory may have returned his original parts.

My article also noted the existence of M1922MI rifles fitted with the M2 bolt and magazine, which were intentionally not remarked on the receiver. Apparently these are both valid and relatively rare versions. The total may only be about two hundred. These rifles were sold through the DCM from about mid 1935, through early 1938, and may even include M1922MI rifles assembled from parts on hand, as late as 1937. I recently acquired M1922MI NRA rifle, serial number 19334, blued finish, fitted with a numbered M2 bolt and M2 magazine. Like things can happen in pairs, the receiver is not remarked in any way, and the rifle is mounted in the regular M1922 NRA stock. Also included with this rifle appears to be the original type numbered M1922MI bolt and magazine. There was no history available on this rifle either, and my conjecture on this piece is a DCM sales rifle, sold this way at the request of the original owner.

My article also stated that finger grooves in NRA stocks do not denote Model of 1922 service issue rifles. A knowledgeable collector has suggested that since both MI and M2 service issue rifle stocks have finger grooves, this is a good basis for an assumption that the very few Model of 1922 rifles used for service issue had the very few NRA finger groove stocks. Documentary evidence does not support this assumption. In my opinion, the first few NRA stocks had finger grooves because all of the previous Krag and M1903 type "S" stocks to this point in time had finger grooves. All reference texts support that finger grooves were removed after the first lot or so of stocks. One reference states to facilitate checkering the forend. Records also support that probably well over half of the rifles used for service issue, were from those resold back to the Army by the NRA. These were rifles originally intended for sale and distribution by the NRA. Most Model of 1922 M2 conversion marked rifles are considered to be previous service issue rifles. The one in my collection, serial number 1813A, is still in what appears to be the original issue NRA stock, without finger grooves. It is possible there were issue rifles with finger groove NRA stocks, and just as likely some without.

Fred Ewalt, Connecticut

Thanks for the clarifications and additions, Fred. I've received several very favorable comments on your article.

Recently I came across more documentation on the USMC conversion of M1922MI/M2 rifles to M1903 configuration, so it is well-documented. Whether a particular specimen was converted by the Marines is another issue.

As for early Model of 1922 stocks with finger grooves, I doubt it. In the report of the Infantry School Dept. of Experiment written by Lt. Grosvenor Watkyns, dated Jan. 31, 1923, the forestock is described as "smooth and extra full"; a rifle having stock without finger grooves is illustrated. In specifying the stock for the Mark I .22 rifle in May, 1924, Lee Wright speaking for the Chief of Ordnance stated that it will be "the same as the pistol grip stock now being manufactured for service test at Springfield Armory ... , except that it will be a sporting stock with a forearm in general like that of the present .22 caliber stock but with grasping grooves." The Director of Civilian Marksmanship, Col. Stodter (referring to the Model of 1922), stated that "The stock and butt plate were originally designed for use on the heavy barrel International Match rifle and were later adopted for the .22-caliber rifles made for the National Rifle Association". The barrel groove is wider at points on the MI stock, so close examination of the inlets fit should reveal whether an MI NRA stock has been retrofitted to a Model of 1922 barreled action (the .30 NRA Sporter was designed to use the same stock as the MI with the addition of stock bolts, hence its barrel was made heavier than that of the service rifle).

I have much Ordnance correspondence from 1935 and 1936 on converting and changing the markings on M1922 and M1922MI rifles, but it's too complicated to go into here.

M1922M2 Rifle

These are the exact markings as they appear on my M1922M2 #1626A.

SPRINGFIELD
MODEL OF 1922
CAL..22 M2
1626 A

It came with a well used stock only marked with a P in a square on the pistol grip. The barrel date is SA 5-37. Since this rifle went through armory rebuild, as indicated by the "A", I felt that this gave me a "license" to restock it. At the spring OGCA show, I was very lucky to find four .22 stocks. I've not been able to recall when I ever saw stocks on the "loose" before. Since these items are becoming so scarce, I snapped them up and have spares now. So I put the best matching stock on 1626A and it looks quite nice now.

Since this rifle carried a 1937 barrel and has been through the rebuilt system at SA, I doubt that it could be the one you refer to from the W. Va. University (1926). But I do wish it could be lettered.

When I typed the receiver markings above, I set the typewriter to center the text. The M2 and the A shown on this paper are in the exact locations as on the rifle and were clearly added sometime after the original receiver markings were put on. The A is slanted slightly to the right and has "serifs" on the bottom on the right.

J.W.W., New York

Model of 1922 rifles converted to M2 are very scarce, and you were lucky to find this one.

The practice of marking Model of 1922 rifles converted to M2 with "M2" after the model designation and "A" after the serial number was approved in 1935.

Although the records show that Model of 1922 rifle no. 1626 was lost or stolen from the Univ. of W. Va. in 1926, the recovery rate of firearms was much higher then than it is now, and it is quite likely that this rifle was recovered. The fact that although it was originally procured through the N.R.A., it was most likely in an Army R.O.T.C. unit, made it subject to the recall of rifles that occurred at the outset of WWII and could account for its conversion to M2.

Kennedy Recoil Pad; Krag Carbine Cases

I have a unique 03 sgfd accessory that I would like to share with the newsletter. The accessory is a soft cushion butt pad that attaches to the steel butt plate. I'm sending photos and instructions that came with the pad. The pad is a very soft leather and was made as a tribute to the Minnesota First Infantry unit. It came with two button snap head screws to replace the original screws. The pad snaps on with ease. I have not tested the butt pad but I'm sure it had to be a great improvement over the steel plate.

Second, I'm sending a photo of two gun cases. I believe they are for the 30-40 Krag carbine? But I have not found any material on them. The top case in the photo is khaki color and stamped US 1889. The lower case is olive drab color and is stamped US 1901. A Krag carbine fits in both cases like a glove. Both cases have the same type end tie rope and leather strap. The leather strap has a Mauser type gun sling keeper. Do you have any idea what they are or information on them?

D. G. A., Minnesota

Sorry; nothing on either of them. My guess is that the cases were produced for use by rifle teams.

Early Rimfire Cartridges and Remington Conversions

While going through the Chief of Ordnance Letters Received (RG156 E21) files for 1868, I came across reports of inventories that were made at the various arsenals in 1868 of Spencer cartridges on hand. Some of these inventories contained interesting information pertaining to the origin and makeup of these cartridges:

Spencer Cartridge Box Labels

Reported by Fort Monroe Arsenal and Allegheny Arsenal in March, 1868.

- 1) Metallic Cartridges For Spencers Rifle or Joslyns Carbine Percussioned by Sharps Process, Manufactured by Sharps & Hankins Philadelphia, Cal. 52.
- 2) Metallic Cartridges For Spencer or Joslyn Rifle, Manufactured by Sage Ammunition Works Middletown Conn. Cal. 52.
- 3) Smith & Wessons Patent Metallic Cartridges For Spencers Rifle or Joslyns Carbine, Manufactured by C. D. Leet, Springfield Mass. Cal. 52.
- 4) Metallic Cartgs. For the Spencer & Joslyn Carbine Navy and Infantry Size, Manufactured by Crittenden & Tibbals South Coventry, Conn. U.S. Cal. 52.

- 8) № 56 Smith & Wessons patent Metallic Cartridges for Spencer or Joslyns Carbine patented April 17, 1860 manufactured by C. D. Leet, Springfield Mass.
- 9) № 56 Metallic Cartridges for Spencer or Joslyns

Carbine — percussioned by Sharps process patented Dec. 1st, 1863 manufactured by Sharps & Hankins Philadelphia,

A listing submitted by Washington Arsenal on March 14, 1868, contained cal. .54 Spencer rifle cartridges made by Sharps & Hankins; cal. .56 rifle or carbine cartridges made by C. D. Leets; cal. .56 carbine cartridges made by D. C. Sage, Crittenden & Tibbals, and Fitz Vandixon; and cal. .50 cartridges made by Crittenden & Tibbals.

The references to Smith & Wesson and Sharps caught my eye. Sellers in Sharps Firearms, pg. 333 states, "In general, the various Sharps companies made ammunition only for the guns they themselves made. The only exception to this is the Navy pistol cartridges made under United States Government contract in 1860". Then on the next page, Sellers states, "The U.S. Government purchased over 2,000,000 rimfire cartridges and 54,600 pinfire cartridges from Sharps & Hankins". Sellers gives the caliber of the Sharps & Hankins Military Rifle as ".54 Sharps & Hankins". He states, "A few of the very early specimens have the marking C. SHARPS PATENT 1859".

Assuming that the cartridge box labels were accurate, Sellers' statement about the Sharps companies (presumably including Sharps & Hankins) made cartridges only for their own guns appeared to be inaccurate. However, in going through Navy ordnance records for the Civil War period, I had found an indication that the Spencer cartridge could be used in later Sharps & Hankins rifles (which, by the way, are frequently referred to in the Navy records as "Model 1859 Sharps", causing a certain amount of confusion). None of the Sharps companies made pinfire arms.

On a somewhat unrelated subject, I found a letter from Rollin White of Lowell, Mass., dated Feb. 8, 1868 (NA RG 156 E 21 1868W F 53) in which he reports that he "has forwarded the altered Colt's pistol as promised and states that the changing of Colt and Remington pistols to make them like it, will be attended with but little expense". Rollin White was, of course, the holder of the patent on bored-through revolver cylinders, which he had licensed exclusively to Smith & Wesson. However, he refers to some litigation with Smith & Wesson, the result of which might interfere with his performing this work. White had been granted his patent in Apr., 1855, and licensed it to S&W in Nov., 1856; the patent and license were valid until 1872.

All of this lead me to do some research on the Smith & Wesson and Sharps patents mentioned in the Spencer cartridge labels; the results were very enlightening.

The early patent records have been moved to Archives II at College Park, Md., which makes them convenient for me to access.

Smith & Wesson Cartridge Patents

Not having the patent number, I had some trouble finding the S&W patent of April 17, 1860. Using the patent listings, I did find two earlier ones that were of interest. The first was no. 11,496 dated August 8, 1854, for what is essentially a centerfire metallic cartridge:

Fig. 2.

In this cartridge, the center priming powder is surrounded by tallow.

The next S&W patent I found was no. 14,147 dated January 22, 1856, for "Improved Primers for Cartridges of Firearms":

Fig. 7.

This is obviously an improved version of the Volcanic cartridge. Although it does not qualify as a metallic cartridge, it is again a centerfire design.

Finally, with the assistance of S&W Historian Roy Jinks, I was able to find the Smith & Wesson patent of April 17, 1860 (no. 27,933); the cartridge it applies to is shown in the column.

This patent covers a rimfire cartridge, with the fulminate held in place by a paper wad. A large amount of paperwork is included with this patent in the Archives files. Its application was first filed on April 9, 1859. It was turned down twice as interfering with "the application of Christian Sharps of Philadelphia" and the Chandier (French) patent of 1851. It was challenged by Allen & Wheelock as "no improvement on the old French cartridge", and by H. C. Lombard & Co as being "public property".

On October 3, 1859, Smith & Wesson filed a revised claim, to distinguish their cartridge from the French rimfire: "A cartridge in which the fulminate is contained in the hollow annular projecting base substantially as described without being previously inclosed in a hollow metallic ring". The rejections were appealed and challenges overcome, and Smith & Wesson could lay claim to the patent on the rimfire cartridge essentially as we know it; whether Horace Smith and Daniel B. Wesson were the inventors of the rimfire cartridge, can be debated.

Early Sharps Metallic Cartridge Patents

While searching for the Sharps patent dated December 1, 1863, I found an earlier patent by Christian Sharps for an improvement in pinfire cartridges for the Lefauchaux, under which the pinfire cartridges cited by Sellers were undoubtedly made. It contains no reference to a Sharps firearm.

The Sharps patent of Dec. 1, 1863, does not cover a cartridge: it describes a machine and method for filling fulminate into cartridge rims.

Remington Revolver Conversions

While discussing (via e-mail) the S&W cartridge patents with Roy Jinks, I mentioned Rollin White's letter of Feb. 8, 1868, and obtained the following responses: "I have a record of the number of Remingtons converted to .46 Rim Fire and marked with the White patent of April 3, 1855." "On page 260 of Neal and Jinks Smith & Wesson 1857 - 1945 it gives a list of the dates and who received the Remington Conversions. The total 4574 were converted of these 4141 were purchased by B. Kittredge and Co. The rest went to J. W. Storrs, 1 to Wexel & DeGress and 31 to M. W. Robinson who took over J. W. Storrs business".

I don't have the Neal & Jinks book; on pg. 60 of History of Smith & Wesson, by Roy Jinks, it states that in February 1868, S&W signed an agreement with Remington allowing the conversion of these revolvers, and that they were produced between Sept. 1868 and April 1869. Remington paid S&W a royalty on each revolver converted. It is further stated that S&W inspected the revolvers and was responsible for their distribution.

I was hoping that some of this might lead to an answer to the question of why there is no record of the Army procuring Remington conversions. When Roy pointed out the S&W information on the Remington conversions, I thought that perhaps the revolvers converted were obtained from the trade of Remington single-shot pistols for Remington Army revolvers; however, this deal was not signed until Feb. 25, 1871.

Another item I came across in the Ordnance files gave me a better understanding of why Remington would trade new pistols for used revolvers. In July, 1866, Warren Fisher offered to exchange 20,000 to 50,000 new Spencer Model 1865 carbines for old ones, without charge. He made this offer because he had an order for that many carbines, which would expire before he had time to manufacture them; he could fill that order if he could obtain the guns from the Army. Possibly Remington was in the same position in 1871.

There are still many questions to be answered about the early metallic cartridges and arms, but I gained a better understanding of this period from a study of the patent files; and especially, a better appreciation for the key position of Smith & Wesson. ☈

Guns "Lettered" During Current Period

The following firearms were documented during the period covered by this issue. If you would like to get in touch with the person a letter was written for, send us your message together with a stamped envelope with blank address. We will affix a label and forward your message. There is no guarantee that you will receive a reply, of course; but we write quite a few letters for dealers, who would no doubt like to hear from someone interested in a particular gun. Make sure that your message contains the serial number and model of the gun you are interested in, and that you furnish separate messages and envelopes if you are interested in more than one. THIS OFFER, FOR GUNS IN THIS ISSUE, EXPIRES ON JANUARY 1, 1998.

Caution!

While we take reasonable measures to ensure the accuracy of serial number data reported here and in our other publications, there is a certain error rate associated with the transcription and entry of the large amount of data we are handling. Therefore, you are advised against paying premium prices for firearms based on a listing alone, without a supporting letter. In all cases before furnishing letters, we go back to the original records and confirm the data in the listing.
